SUITOR SLEW EDITOR SAYS WIFE

5 Jurors Picked for Carbarn Trial

1 DEAD, 3 DYING IN BARGE FIRE

WILL SHE TESTIFY?

Mrs. Peter McLaughlin, wife of accused man who faces trial today for slaying of James Ferneau, the watchman in Waltham carbarn robbery, is expected in court each day and may be a witness for the State against her husband. After his arrest she said she would testify against him. Whether her mind has changed only her counsel knows.

AGED COUPLE DEAD FROM GAS

Haverhill, March 21—Harry Dearborn, aged 65, and his wife, Mabel, were found dead in bed at their home on Middlesex street, Bradford, today. Gas escaping from a faulty fixture on a small stove used to heat the bedroom had asphyxiated the couple. Their bodies were found by Frank Dearborn, a brother.

THE VATICAN, watching all corners of the Earth with a million eyes, says the turn has come and the World is recovering from its after-the-war immorality. The jazz period in dances and in morals is passing in Christendom and Pagan lands.

Turkey is suppressing immoral dances; Japan is dealing seriously with the social evil; "all governments," says the Vatican report, "are occupying themselves with the task of checking immorality."

THAT IS gratifying, important news, and then more important is news that tells of the discovery by British scientists of a new vitamin, 1,000 times more powerful than any known hitherto. It will cure rickets and, more interesting, it seems to

3 SWIM TO SAFETY IN BLAZE

One man is dead and two sailors and a fire lieutenant are dying as the result of a fire today which, apparently started from live coals thrown on oil-covered water, swept over the barges Noble Maxwell and Eureka, moored at the foot of Condor street, East Boston.

One fireman was injured. Seven men escaped without injury from the two barges, but three of them only saved themselves, after their clothing caught fire, by diving into the water and swimming ashore."

The charred body of Arthur Greenleaf, 21, of Trivette, Me., a fireman on the Eureka, was fished from the water by the harbor police two hours after the fire was out.

The injured are:

Lieutenant Joseph M. Donovan, Engine 9, of No. 323 Columbia road, Dorchester. At East Boston relief hospital with broken back and is reported dying.

Arthur McCauley, 28, of Boothbay, Me., dying at the relief hospital from burns.

Peter Peddel, 53, No 1½ Arnold street, Roxbury, dying at the relief hospital from universal burns.

Allen McIntyre of Engine 9, treated at the hospital for a broken finger.

BEGIN MOVIE CONTEST IN TODAY'S AMERICAN

THE Boston Evening American's "Who's Who in the Movies" competition gets under way with the appearance of this announcement.

It will continue for 24 publication days and will be followed by the presentation of awards of unusual value.

In connection with today's Test problem, participants in the new competition will have very little to worry about. The popular player whose picture is used—with a part of the head missing—is so well known that he cannot indulge in so much as a visit to the barber-shop without making news for all his countrymen.

An addition was made to the list of prizes on Saturday, so ate that you may not know about it, wherefore, early in today's discourse, the Test Editor must call attention to the fact that the Second Award will bre a FORD SEDAN, of the very latest type.

HOLDUP IN SCOLLAY SQ

Three armed thugs today looted the United Cigar Store at Court street and Cornhill, Scollay square, holding up the clerk, Benjamin White, for the second time within three weeks and getting away with $300.

A fourth member of the gang waited outside with a curtained touring car bearing a Rhode Island number plate. All made their escape in this car.

White is positive that the youthful leader of the trio that entered the store is the man who, acting alone, robbed him of $200 less than three weeks ago.

"We just love to get these places," he said to White today as he laughingly robbed the cash register and forced White to open the safe containing Saturday's receipts while his "pals" kept guns pointed on the clerk.

WAITS ON CUSTOMERS.

Two customers came in during the robbery, but left without suspecting anything more than that White was "pretty sick." The thugs concealed their weapons, but softly cautioned the clerk to "do his stuff" with the customers.

With slight hesitation, which one of the customers noted, White obeyed their orders.

"Stick 'em up," two of the thugs commanded the clerk as the trio first entered the store, forty minutes after opening time. White did, seeing two guns leveled at him by

WIFE ACCUSES MARRIED SUITOR OF SLAYING HER HUSBAND IN LOVE PLOT

New York, March 21 (A.P.).—Mrs. Ruth Snyder today asserted in a statement to the police that Henry Judd Gray, now under arrest in Syracuse, had murdered her husband, Albert Snyder, art editor of a magazine, in order that he might be free to marry her.

According to the statement, Mrs. Snyder said Gray was concealed in their home in Queens Village when she, her husband and their nine-year-old daughter Lorraine returned early Sunday morning from a card party.

Gray, according to Mrs. Snyder, beat Synder to death and then wound a picture wire around his throat. After the murder Gray bound Mrs. Snyder to cast an appearance of burglary over the crime.

The police said Mrs. Snyder had told them she had known Gray for 2½ years and that she wanted her husband out of the way that she might marry Gray.

District Attorney Newcombe said that a charge of homicide would be filed against Mrs. Snyder, but declined to say what charge will be placed against Gray.

According to the story Mrs. Snyder told to the police, she returned home from a "rather wild party" with her husband and their daughter at 1:30 a. m., Sunday,

FIVE JURORS PICKED IN M'LAUGHLIN TRIAL

Five jurors were selected in two hours and a half today to try the case of Peter J. McLaughlin of Brighton, charged with the murder of James H. Ferneau, aged watchman at the Waltham carbarn, in October, 1925.

In the order picked, they were:

George H. Davis, Jr., truckman, of Framingham.

Clifford A. Payne, salesman, of Woburn.

Samuel I. Fendell, upholsterer, Somerville.

William A. Murphy, salesman, Arlington.

Norman Kniznick, sales manager, of Waltham.

The fifth juror selected was the forty-first man called of the panel of 300 veniremen summoned into Middlesex Superior Court.

Not until the twentieth venireman approached the bench did objection to capital punishment come up as an excuse. Then, however, the capital punishment opponents came in a deluge.

Daniel Toland, real estate man of Woburn, was the first objector and

There also was malice in the heart of William J. Cameron, editor of the Ford-owned weekly, and on the part of the Dearborn Independent, said William Henry Gallagher, Sapiro's counsel.

The jury was sent from the courtroom at the opening of court and the attorneys began delving into

WIFE CHARGES MARRIED SUITOR SLEW HER ARTIST HUSBAND IN TRIANGLE TRAGEDY

They went to bed at 2:15 o'clock. Her husband went to sleep immediately, she said, lying on his left side so that his left ear was muffled by the pillow. He was deaf in his right ear and so could not easily have been awakened.

"Somebody went down and let Gray in," Mrs. Snyder is reported to have said.

She talked for a while with Gray and it was decided that the latter should kill her husband, the police reported. Snyder was struck by an iron bar while he was asleep.

Faked Robbery Scene

Then to simulate robbery all the furniture in the house was turned topsy turvy and Snyder's pocketbook, containing $110, was taken. Mrs. Snyder's pearls were hidden under the mattress of the bed, and she had Gray bind her.

As a further device to mislead the police a torn newspaper was left on the floor.

Mr. Snyder had been working on a boat of his own designing. He had a toolbox with a complete set of tools for heavy woodworking in the house. In this box he kept a pinchbar of a type found in Gray's room at Syracuse. The police have not been able to locate the bar in Snyder's home.

Detectives learned that Snyder had recently increased his life insurance from $10,000 to $25,000.

Police said another incident that aided in accounting for the surprise attack on Snyder was that at the card party Mrs. Snyder asked that her husband be given all the liquor he desired.

Not Sure Gray Married

Lorraine told the police that her parents had been quarreling recently over her mother's late hours.

The district attorney said the investigation had resulted in exoneration of those who attended the bridge whist party the night before the murder. There had been some drinking at the party, it was said, and differences arose between Snyder and George Hough over a trivial matter and friends separated them.

Newcombe said Snyder apparently had been under the influence of liquor and went to bed as soon as he arrived at his home. He would not discuss the question of the motive for the crime.

Mrs. Snyder, according to the statement made to the detectives, said she had never been sure whether or not Gray was married.

Came for Week-Ends

He worked from New York offices at Fifth avenue and 34th street, she said, in territory extending along the New York Central Railroad between New York and Buffalo and for the last week had been working out of Syracuse.

It was his custom, she is alleged to have said, to come to New York for week-ends, but not always to go to his home in East Orange.

Gray Unmoved by Charge; Calls Arrest "Ridiculous!"

Syracuse, N. Y., March 21 (A.P.).—Calm, dapper and apparently undisturbed Henry Judd Gray, of East Orange, N. J., who was arrested in the Onondaga hotel here today, heard himself accused of the murder of Albert Snyder, 45, art editor of Motor Boating Magazine, who was killed in his home in Queens Village, New York, early Sunday morning.

Gray, a corset salesman, heard the accusation with no outward show of emotion. He shrugged his shoulders. He made a flat denial of the crime. Then he asked regarding his wife and child, who live at East Orange.

The accusation came from the lips of Chief of Police Martin L. Cadin, Deputy Chief George S. Peacock and Dectective Lieutenants Brown and McDermott, the latter two from the New York Police Department.

Unmoved by Charge

It was founded upon the signed confession made in New York by Mrs. Ruth Snyder, 32, wife of the slain man. In that confession, according to dispatches from New York, Mrs. Snyder named Gray as the actual murderer of her husband. His death, she stated, was planned as the means of making it possible for her towed Gray.

It was a story of love, craft and brutality, constituting one of the most startling crimes in the history of the country, that came from the lips of the police officers. Gray heard it all calmly, outwardly; it interested him not at all.

So when the officers had finished their questioning, he was led to a cell to await removal to New York City. There, it was indicated, he will be formally accused of the murder of Synder.

Gray is five feet, seven inches tall. He weighs 140 ponds. His complexion is dark and he has dark hair.

At the time of his arrest he wore a dark gray suit, black shoes and a Fedora hat of the same color.

Will Prove an Alibi

From the very start he denied all knowledge of the crime. He admitted he knew Mrs. Snyder. He stated that he had not been in the vicinity of New York City for weeks. He described the accusation as "ridiculous."

Haddon Gray, a Syracuse friend of the man held, but not a relative, in an interview, supplied information which will probably be the vital part of an attempt on the part of the prisoner to prove an alibi at the time of the murder.

Gray said the suspect lunched with him Saturday.

"I am not sure just what time it was," he explained. "It probably was about two o'clock."

Sunday afternoon, Haddon Gray said, the prisoner called him p.

"I did not answer the telephone because I was sleeping," he stated, "but I did take dinner with him Sunday night."

A maid in the Onondaga Hotel is the authority for the statement that Gray's baggage was in the room late Saturday afternoon when she made the usual inspection at that time.

Gray Was Nervous

The same maid declared the bed gave evidence of having been occupied when she went to the room Sunday morning.

But Dr. John B. Howe of the editorial staff of a Syracuse newspaper, who had a room directly across the hall from Gray, told of seeing a man attempt to gain entrance to the room of the suspect Sunday morning about 10 o'clock.

The man, according to Dr. Howe, was thickset. He pounded at the door for several moments, but apparently obtained no answer.

An official of the hotel told of seeing Gray Friday and Saturday. On Friday, the hotel man said, me met Gray for the first time. The hotel man encountered him in the lobby Saturday morning and extended his hand.

Gray accepted it. But he was a different appearing man, according to the hotel official, from the man he had met the day before.

"Ho looked ill and nervous," the hotel man explained. "I asked him if he was ill. He told me that he was not and said he was perfectly all right."

FIVE JURORS SELECTED FOR SECOND CARBARN TRIAL

in answer to questions by the court he declared three previous executions were sufficient in payment for the life of one man.

McLaughlin, almost six feet tall, dark and of athletic build, watched the proceedings keenly and with face set and somewhat pale.

He has very black hair, parted on the side, and wore a blue serge suit, a white soft-collar shirt, a black four-in-hand and tan shoes.

While the empaneling proceedings were going on, the crowd of prospective spectators, numbering several hundreds, were barred from the courtroom by order of Judge Hugo Dubuque, principally because there was not room for them.

COURTROOM CROWDED.

Three hundred veniremen had been summoned and most of them reported, jamming the room.

So tight a fit were the veniremen, the counsel, the court attendants and the counsel in the small room that Judge Dubuque finally ordered that the jurors be moved to an adjoining courtroom and called in one at a time. This relieved the pressure and gave breathing space.

Empaneling of the jury was begun at 10:30 when Clerk of Court Ralph Smith, after informing McLaughlin that he had the right to challenge 22 men pre-emptorily and unlimited number by assigning cause, called the name of Trueman G. Messer, farmer, of Billerica.

Messer responded, carrying a handbag and arousing speculation as to whether he had come prepared to remain. But McLaughlin, rising from his seat, snapped out in a firm voice: "I challenge the juror."

The veniremen, as in the case of Messer, were each asked if they were related either to Ferneau or McLaughlin, if they had formed or expressed an opinion in the case, if they were conscious of any bias, and whether, if the evidence warranted, they would be willing to return a verdict of guilty, punishable by death.

McLaughlin's challenge of Messer came when the farmer answered unhesitantingly that he would convict if the evidence was strong enough.

The second venireman called was Davis, and he was accepted as the first juror, taking his place in the box.

Third to be called was John B. Furlong, a contractor, of Framingham. He was challenged by the State.

Edward E. Ephlin, traveling salesman, of Somerville, was also challenged by the State when he hesitated for a number of seconds before answering the question as to whether he was opposed to capital punishment.

HIS WIFE NOT PRESENT.

The State was represented by District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell, principal prosecutor, who had with him his assistant district attorneys, Robert J. White and Fred A. Crafts.

George A. Douglas and John J. Wilson appeared as counsel for McLaughlin.

In the courtroom during the empanelling were State Detectives Edward Sherlock and Edward O'Neil and State Firearms Expert Captain Charles A. Van Amburgh.

McLaughlin's wife, who announced shortly after his arrest that she would testify against him, was not in evidence during the first few hours after trial proceedings were begun.

Neither was any other of McLaughlin's family seen.

The second juror selected was the thirteenth man called. He was Payne, the Woburn salesman, and thirty-six minutes of the proceedings had elapsed by the time he was chosen.

Preceding his selection, Edward A. Burns, engineer of Waltham, fifth venireman called, was excused because he had formed an opinion.

John L. O'Leary, teamster, of Somerville, was challenged by the State.

BALKAN CLOUD OVERSHADOWS ARMS PARLEY

Vienna, Austria, March 21 (A.P.).—Unconfirmed reports continue to arrive from Tirana, the Albanian capital, alleging that Jugo-Slavia is inciting irresponsible elements in Albania to revolt. Fearing aggression, the Albanian authorities are preparing a defence for the northern frontier, bringing up howitzer batteries and concentrating troops at strategic points.

Paris, March 21 (I.N.S.).—While the French Foreign Office deprecates talk of war in the Balkans, the press generally declares that the situation is delicate.

Considerable prominence is given to reports that Great Britain has sent a note, which is a virtual ultimatum, to Jugo-Slavia demanding that she cease warlike activities.

M. Briand, French foreign minister, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, held a lengthy conference over the telephone today, relative to the necessity for calling a special session of the League of Nations Council to consider the matter of Italy, Jugo-Slavia and Albania. No decision was made.

There was general excitement as reports were received of the threatening trouble between Italy and Jugo-Slavia over alleged warlike preparations by Jugo-Slavia.

There were no indications that the league council would be called in special session to deal with the matter. M. Yovanovitch, Jugo-Slavian Minister at Berne, denied that Jugo-Slavia would ask a league council session.

SPRING IS HERE, WORSE THAN ITS SAMPLE

Spring, having misled Bostonians with gorgeous samples during the past ten days, arrived today and uncorked a chilly rain to dampen the Hub.

This brand of weather was due to continued through tomorrow, according to the local weather bureau, and even more dire things may be in the offing.

Throughout the West, as far South as Texas, Winter lingers overtime with freezing temperatures. Boston was 15 degrees warmer today than Northern Texas, where the mercury ranged in the twenties.

Storm disturbances, with rain and snow, are prevalent from the Atlantic Coast as far West as the Missouri River valley and Boston will get much of this wetness, the weatherman predicts.

Central West Hard Hit by Overflowing of Rivers

Chicago, March 21 (A.P.) More rain and snow was the offering on the first day of Spring for the Central West where many rivers and creeks already were running flood high as a result of heavy week-end precipitation.

Indiana probably was the hardest hit by the high water, hundreds of acres of farm lands along the Wabash River and both forks of the White River being inundated. The southern part of Terre Haute was under water.

SET WELLESLEY LARCENY CASE FOR APRIL 6

Joseph K. Switzer, former bookkeeper at Wellesley College, accused in connection with the $12,000 shortage recently discovered in the college funds, was arraigned in Dedham District court today on the charge of larceny. Switzer pleaded not guilty.

He motored to court with his wife from their home in Wellesley. Switzer was apparently undisturbed as he entered the not guilty plea although both he and his wife were keenly interested in the court procedure.

Arraignment was before Judge Clifford B. Sanborn, who, after hearing the plea, announced a continuance of the case until April 6. The Norfolk County grand jury meets on April 4.

Switzer's bail was fixed at $5,000 and his wife signed the bond.

Switzer, who for years was employed in the college offices at Wellesley, was recently dismissed after the shortage was discovered. Saturday a warrant was sworn out for his arrest and a short time later he gave himself up, having arranged for his wife to go on his bond.

Here we have a very sweet symbolization of the consequent arrival of Spring with Muriel Morrison of Needham stepping out of the clock right on the dot. Unofficially Spring has been with us for a week but the official arrival was somewhat less springlike, today's rain being of the Winterish variety, just a little warmer than the snow flurry of the Sabbath. However, everything will be all right soon, as smiling skies and a milder temperature are due tomorrow.

'MESSIAH,' WHO HAD 'SOUL WIVES' GALORE, IS DEAD

London, March 21 (A.P.).—One of England's most remarkable sensations in the religious sphere is recalled by the death at Spixton, Somerset, of John Hugh Smyth Piggott.

Piggott, head of a sect known as the Agapemonites, announced in 1905 that he was the Messiah, and retired shortly afterward to the famous Agapemonite "Abode of Love."

He had a lawful wife, but this did not deter him from taking a "spiritual spouse," who bore him three children. Recruits, usually wealthy young women, often arrived at the "Abode of Love to become disciples or "soul wives" of Piggott, after putting all their money into a common pool, controlled by the "Messiah."

There was a great outcry against Piggott and his "Abode of Love" throughout England, and he was expelled from the Church of England.

Othello ~ ~ Shakespeare's Drama of Jealousy

"My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs."

Othello, the Moorish soldier of fortune, charmed gentle Desdemona with stories of his exploits. The girl loved the swarthy Moor, and they were secretly married without the consent of her father, Brabantio, the rich senator.

"To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the best way to draw new mischief on."

The irate father, seeking to have Othello punished for "witchcraft," was bidden by the Duke of Venice to keep his peace. Othello, vindicated, was sent to command the army against the Turks, who were besieging Cyprus.

"And nothing can or shall content my soul,
Till I am evened with him wife for wife!"

The military crisis in Cyprus did not develop, because the Turkish fleet was destroyed in a storm. But the vindictive Iago, smarting under an unfounded report that Othello had wronged Iago's wife, vowed revenge by treachery.

"O God, that men should put an enemy
In their mouths to steal away their brains!"

Cassio, promoted in rank over Iago's head, was also the object of Iago's venom. Iago got Cassio drunk while on duty, whereby a quarrel was provoked and a bystander wounded. Cassio was disgraced and reduced to ranks by Othello.

WANT FIN. COM. FOR CAMBRIDGE

"Cambridge is in the grip of a spoils system and there seems no hope for the taxpayer except an appeal to the Commonwealth," declared Representative Arthur Blanchard of that city today as he filed a bill providing for a finance commission for Cambridge.

The bill is practically the same as that enacted in 1926 for Lowell.

The commission would be appointed by the Governor with the approval of the council and would consist of three members. The chairman would receive $3,000 and the other two members $500.

MALICE IN FORD'S HEART IS ACCUSER'S CHARGE

musty tomes, brought in by the armload, as they reeled off precedents for ruling both for and against evidence which would bear upon the alleged double jeopardy of Henry Ford and the Dearborn Independent, as set out by Gallagher, or the inability of the jury to assess punitive damages against one defendant because of wealth, while fixing the forfeited payment of the other and poorer at a lesser figure.

INSISTS ON PLOT CHARGE.

Stewart Hanley, of Ford counsel, insisted that Gallagher formerly had committed himself to the condition that if malice on the part of both Ford and the publication were not proven he would expect no verdict in the one case or the other.

Gallagher, replying through a statement to the court, insisted that he intended not only to prove malice on the part of both, but the conspiracy as well.

Sapiro city born and bred, alleged that his reputation and income as an organizer of Farmers' Co-operative Organizations was injured to the extent of the amount claimed, $1,000,000.

Hanley fought against the admittance as evidence of a great stack of records and copies of each issue of the Independent since it came into possession of the Ford family.

Cameron was on the witness stand when court adjourned last Friday and was called at the opening of court today. He failed to respond and Hanley requested that the jury be sent from the courtroom while the legal points involved were discussed.

JOINT MALICE CHARGED

Mr. Gallagher said the fact that a man was wealthy was no ground for charging malice, but wealth or reputed wealth gave weight to a man's words.

"If Henry Ford were guilty of malice for publication of articles he could be sued and judgment rendered," said Gallagher. "If the publishing company were guilty it could be sued and damages collected and if both were guilty of malice a verdict could be obtained against both."

"You intend to prove a joint malice?" asked Judge Raymond.

"Yes, a joint and individual malice," said Gallagher. "Henry Ford and the Dearborn Independent are one and the same as to policies."

The judge said he would reserve decision until a specific occasion arose.

The jury returned and Mr. Cameron took the witness stand.

Mr. Cameron identified a bound volume of the Dearborn Independent containing the first issue under Ford's ownership.

An article on the first page, he said, was his to some extent. He had worked it over. At that time he had never seen Mr. Ford.

Gallagher called for other bound volumes of the Independent, which Mr. Cameron identified.

Seven volumes, taking the issues to the present time, were identified by Mr. Cameron.

Gallagher asked Cameron if he had any part in preparation of an article on April 12, 1924. Cameron replied: "It very probably passed through my hands."

He said he had considered previously publication of this kind of an article.

"With whom did you confer as to this article?" asked Gallagher.

Hanley objected to the question as showing malice toward one. The judge permitted the question to stand.

Cameron said he had discussed it with editorial subordinates. He said no one held a position above him on the Dearborn Independent. He did not discuss with Mr. Ford the article before him regarding Sapiro, nor had he ever discussed Sapiro with Ford, he testified.

A question as to whether Ford ever discussed with Cameron or anyone the article regarding Sapiro was objected to by Ford counsel and sustained by Judge Raymond.

FORD HIS "BOSS"

Gallagher read from the Independent which referred to "a ring of Jews on the back of the American farmer." Cameron identified it as the leading article on the front page of that issue. Gallagher passed the article around to the jury for perusal.

Gallagher had a hard time getting an admission from Cameron that he recognized Mr. Ford as a superior. After a dozen efforts he phrased a question that withstood defense objection.

Because of the peculiarities of law governing Cameron's appearance on the witness stand, Gallagher informed the court he was being careful not to cross-examine or lead the witness.

Under the State law which for the moment was accepted in the Federal Court, Cameron had been called by Sapiro, although classified as an unfriendly witness.

Referring to the article mentioning Sapiro as a member of a Jewish conspiracy, Cameron testified he didn't have in mind the name of any one Jew who was a member of the band of Jews referred to in the article and which was supposed to control Sapiro.

He said he did not know at the time of publication that not one dollar had been received by so-called Sapiro organizations from Jewish bankers.

Gallagher objected to the apparent hostility of the witness and asked the judge to instruct him to confine himself to answering questions.

REVEALS JEW ISSUE

Cameron testified that at the time of the publication of the story he was under the impression that several Jewish advertising agencies were connected with the Sapiro associations.

Asked by Gallagher if he did not know that only one association, the Prune Growers, employed a Jewish advertising firm, Cameron said he did not.

He did not know, he said, that no Jew was associated with the fruit growers at the time the Independent referred to the Jews controlling the Sapiro-formed association.

Cameron said he knew generally the headquarters of the alleged band of Jews controlling the fruit growers.

"Whom did you know as authority on the activities of this ring?" asked Gallagher.

"Oh, several who were investigating for Harry H. Dunn of San Francisco," Cameron said. "Dunn wrote the articles under the name of Robert Morgan."

Dunn was the only one specifically employed to investigate, although they received many letters containing information, Cameron said.

Gallagher asked if anyone was sent out into the territory besides Dunn and Cameron replied he had no one in mind.

slavia has only to choose the day and hour if she desires to break her head against the Fascist will," declares Il Tevere, extreme Fascist newspaper.

"How is it possible," it continues, "to fail to use the word 'madness' in speaking of Jugoslavia?

"Jugoslavia, the restless Balkanic creature, still torn by party struggles, which we as a great power have treated as an equal, Jugoslavia, the trouble-maker, always trying to provoke us, today with the poisoned darts of Raditch, tomorrow with an Albanian insurrection, and then with secret military treaties."

No War Unless Italy Invades, Says Official

Geneva, March 21 (A.P.).—There can be no question of Jugoslavia invading Albania unless Italy begins an invasion, an official of the Jugoslav government told the press as he arrived at the League of Nations palace today to participate in the session of the preparatory disarmament commission.

He ridiculed reports that Jugoslavia was mobilizing or dispatching troops to the Albanian frontier, and added that the Belgrade government was ready to ask the military attaches of the Allied Powers to proceed to the spot and see the situation for themselves.

DENIED INJUNCTION AGAINST G. B. SHAW

London, March 21 (A.P.).—The chancery division today dismissed the action brought against George Bernard Shaw by Jesse Arnold Levinson of Los Angeles in connection with the film rights of the operetta "The Chocolate Soldier."

Levinson had asked for an injunction to restrain Shaw from telling film producers or others that any motion picture entitled "The Chocolate Soldier" or based on that operetta would infringe his copyright, as the plot was taken from Shaw's "Arms and the Man."

MANY THRILLS IN 'RED SIGNAL'

Rosalind tired of long, lonesome evenings at home and Rosalind "stepped out," began going out to parties and the sort of parties that anyone might be invited to at any time. And thereby hangs a tale.

For the thrilling experiences of Rosalind, read "The Red Signal," something new in illustrated serial stories. Every chapter can be read in a few moments and every chapter is illustrated with a picture. This is the ideal way to follow a plot without reading rivers of text that would be better curtailed.

This new form of a story in cameo begins in the Boston Evening American on Monday, March 28. The story is of compelling interest, full of thrills and unexpected situations but the best feature of it is that the events described might happen to anyone who goes out for simple amusement.

Remember "The Red Signal" begins in the Boston Evening American Monday, March 28.

"BOLD" GIRL BURGLARS CORNERED AT LAST

Chicago, March 21 (A.P.)—Two girl robbers in their middle 'teens, who pilfered bungalows at the point of a pistol, were reflecting on their brief careers of crime in a cell today.

A wakeful citizen ruined the girls' chances of obtaining loot valued at $200, and they were caught before they had a chance to use a gun. A shot fired from a policeman's pistol so frightened Anna Varich, 16, and her chum, Jean Buttick, 15, they huddled behind a door, where police came upon them, expecting to find desperate holdup men.

"All they need is a diploma," said one of the captors. Anna, thoroughly frightened, dropped her pistol, while at her feet fell rings, bracelets, beaded bags and articles. She admitted having a police record. The police believed a dozen recent bungalow robberies could be traced to operations of the girls.

NEW BEDFORD KICKS AT INCREASED FARES

New Bedford textile workers today protested vigorously against the intention of the Union Street Railway Company to increase fares from five to ten cents on April 15. The company operates the last of the five-cent lines in the State.

In a letter to the Public Utilities Commission, William Batty, secretary of the New Bedford Textile Council, on behalf his own organization, which numbers several thousand, and the local Central Labor Union, urged public hearings on the new fare schedule.

Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the commission declared the petition of the textile workers would be taken under advisement and a decision made speedily.

1 DEAD, 3 ARE DYING IN FIRE ON BARGES to go aboard the barges, preparatory for a trip to Ipswich for loads of sand and gravel when the fire broke out.

WATERFRONT THREATENED.

Ships, barges and waterfront structures along the Chelsea creek were threatened as firemen fought to prevent the flames from spreading and for a time it was feared that the fire would even reach the Standard Oil tanks, a short distance upstream.

Oil drifting down from tankers at the oil company docks, coming in contact with fiery coals thrown from one of the barges, is believed to be responsible for the sudden burst of flame that engulfed the vessels. Two alarms were quickly sounded.

Greenleaf, the drowned man, was in the bunkroom with McCauley, one of the seriously injured, when the fire trapped them.

"Come on, Art, we've got to fight our way out," shouted McCauley as he made a dash through the ring of fire.

DOVE INTO CREEK.

"I can't make it," he heard Greenleaf answer, and then there was a splash which McCauley heard behind him as Greenleaf made the choice of diving into the creek for safety.

Three sailors, Thomas Street of Charlestown, Bert Day of Condor street, East Boston, and Lewis Craven of Kingsbury street, Roxbury, were likewise trapped and they, too, chose to save themselves by diving overboard as the flames licked their clothing. All strong swimmers, they made the bank and clambered to safety.

Fireboats sped up the creek and poured water on the flaming vessels and apparatus arrived from the shore side and firemen, many of them donning gas masks, climbed aboard and battled the flames.

FELL THROUGH HATCHWAY.

Lieutenant Joseph Donovan fell through a hatchway on the deck of the Noble Maxwell and landed on his back. He was dragged to the deck by other firemen and rushed to the hospital. He was unconscious and surgeons said his back was broken. His name is on the danger list.

Crowds thronged to the docks to witness the spectacular blaze and many families in nearby tenements, fearing a big conflagration, prepared to carry their belongings out if the fire spread along the waterfront.

Damage to the barges was estimated at $7,500. An investigation was launched by fire department officials to determine if oil on the water was the primary cause of the fire.

MAN DYING, GIRL HURT AS AUTO STRIKES POLE

Woonsocket, R. I., March 21 (A.P.)—Emile Emond of No. 42 Snow street is dying as the result of skull fracture suffered when a big automobile in which he was riding struck a telegraph pole on the Manville road.

Sylvia Martin, driver of the car, and Elzear Plasse sustained lesser injuries. Emond blamed a hollow in the road for the accident.

FIREMAN BURNED; WOMAN IS RESCUED IN BLAZE

Fall River, March 21.—Thomas O'Brien, fireman, was severely burned, and Mrs. John Duckworth, trapped in her room, was rescued when fire destroyed a paint shop on the ground floor of a wooden structure at No. 462 Second street.

SINCLAIR ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL

Washington, March 21 (A.P.)—Harry F. Sinclair, wealthy oil operator, today formally asked for a new trial on the charges of contempt of the Senate for which he was convicted by a District of Columbia Supreme Court jury.

The motion for a new trial was filed by George P. Hoover and Martin Littleton, counsel for the oil man, and Justice Hitz set March 25 for argument.

Twenty alleged errors in the conviction of Sinclair on the charge of having refused to answer questions while a witness before the Senate oil committee were cited in the motion. Chief among them was the denial of an instructed verdict which was declared to be "contrary to law."

If the motion is denied, Sinclair will be sentenced, the penalty being a fine of from $100 to $1,000 and a jail sentence of from one month to one year. He then may appeal to higher courts.

Dishpan's Clatter May Send Hungry Man to Jail

"Yes, we have no bananas," said Mr. and Mrs. James P. Allen of Lonsdale street, Ashmont, today, as they appeared in Dorchester district court against Cecil Wood, eighteen.

Wood, according to the Allens and the police, climbed through a pantry window and devoured 16 bananas—all there were—and most of a loaf of cake before a dishpan, accidentally knocked down, frightened him to flight.

"I was just hungry," he said, according to police, when caught in Adams street by Patrolman Harry Carlson.

It may be a costly luncheon. Wood, who lives in Ashmont street, was held in $800 on charge of breaking, entering and larceny. Police valued the bananas at 40 cents and the cake at 25 cents.

FIGHT FIRE AT LONG WHARF

Fire broke out in the unoccupied fourth story of the building at No. 6-7 Long Wharf today and dense black smoke swept over the waterfront. District Chief O'Brien, immediately on his arrival took steps to fight a serious conflagration, but investigation showed the fire had not gone below the top floor of the wharf building.

The first floor is a restaurant while the second floor is occupied by a fish dealer. The United Fruit Company employes have a club on the third floor. The fire was confined to the fourth floor and was extinguished with a loss of $1,000.

SENATOR BACON LECTURES AT B. U. ON CONSTITUTION

The birth of the constitution of the United States was pictured today as a meeting at which the document was signed with trembling and many misbivings, by State Senator Gaspar G. Bacon of Boston, lecturing at the Boston University College of Liberal Arts.

The lecture was the first of a series of six lectures on the Constitution, arranged under the Mrs. Robert Bacon lectureship fund.

Senator Bacon, son of the woman who has made the lectures possible, declared the radical thinkers of the time, Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry and Samuel Adams, "theoretical philosophers rather than practical businessmen," were fortunately absent from the constitutional convention.

N. E. PLANS INCREASE IN POTATO ACREAGE

Wakefield, March 21 (A.P.)—The New England Crop Reporting Service anounced today that current reports from many New England farmers indicate they are planning on more acres of potatoes than last year.

In Maine a six per cent. increase is expected, with somewhat uncertain intentions indicated in other states.

The present intention is to increase New England tobacco acreage about 13 per cent. over last year, oats 6.5 per cent., corn 5.4 per cent., barley 11 per cent. and to make small reductions in Spring wheat and hay. Sweet corn for canning will probably show a heavy decrease.

AUTO THIEVES STEAL 20 CARS

Automobile thieves, who have not been particularly active lately, made a new appearance with the debut of Spring and 20 cars were reported stolen in Greater Boston over the week-end.

Most of the cars taken were of the higher-priced class, a different method than heretofore employed by the thieves, who usually were attracted by the low-priced cars, as being easier to dispose of.

In the Back Bay eight cars were stolen; in Lynn, four; in Cambridge, three; while one was stolen from the Lagrange street section, one in the South End, and one each in Arlington, Quincy and Waltham.

British Reinforcements Will Be Sent to Shanghai

Hong Kong, China, March 21 (A.P.)—The first battalion of the British Devonshire regiment is making arrangements to leave for Shanghai immediately.

Evidence of the growing confidence in the safety of Hong Kong is seen in the recent increase in the Chinese colony. Between February 1 and March 7 there were 9,000 more arrivals by steamer than departures. Between February 14 and March 6 5,000 persons arrived by rail from Canton.

PLAN CELEBRATION OVER ERECTION OF NEW TEMPLE

Rabbi Nathan Krass of Temple Emanu-El, New York, will be the principal speaker at exercises planned by Boston Jewry to celebrate the plans for the erection of a new Temple Ohabei Shalom at Beacon and Marshal streets, Brookline.

The celebration has been arranged by the brotherhood and sisterhood of the temple and will be held on March 20 in the temple centre building. Work on the construction of the new temple will be started at once and it is hoped to have the edifice ready for the September holidays. Clebrated artists, including Paul Cherkassky of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will furnish the music for the celebration.

FORMER HUB NEWSPAPER WOMAN DIES IN FRANCE

Chicago, March 21 (A.P.)—Mrs. James Keeley of Chicago, whose husband formerly was managing editor of the Chicago Tribune, and owner of the old Chicago Record-Herald, died last night at Carcassonne, France. She was stricken with pneumonia Friday. Mr. Keeley, now employed by the Pullman Company here, left today for Paris.

Mrs. Keeley was born in Gardiner, Me. She entered newspaper work in Boston and "covered" women's activities of the Chicago World's Fair for the Tribune. Subsequently she acted as Sunday editor. She was married to Mr. Keeley, then city editor of the Tribune, in 1898.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

has been called in celebration of the control of the Cantonese forces.

Shanghai, China, March 21 (A.P.)—French outposts on the farthermost border of the French concession in Shanghai had a brush with a small detachment of Chinese troops this afternoon. Shots were exchanged and the Chinese were driven off.

Shanghai, March 21 (A.P.)—Naval forces, including 1,500 U. S. Marines, were landed in Shanghai today from all warships in the Whangpoo River off the city.

The municipality declared a state of emergency after the Nationalists entered the native city.

The foreign defenders ashore here total 15,000 men, part of them holding the 20-mile exterior defence line while others patrol the streets of the foreign settlements.

The 1,500 American marines are patrolling northern and western mill districts, where trouble is most likely to break out.

IN FULL WAR TOGS.

The marines came ashore with full equipment, including machine-guns and metal helmets, ready to remain until the trouble is over. They landed laughing and joking, glad that their long inactivity cramped aboard ship was over.

French, Italians, Dutch, Portuguese and Spanish likweise debarked strong detachments. The British already have numerous forces ashore.

Just prior to the Nationalist advance into the prize city 1,200 U. S. Marines from the transport Chaumont marched through the principal streets with full field equipment, steel helmets, fixed bayonets and machine guns.

The march was not connected with the Chinese military situation. It was merely to exercise the marines, who returned to the ship immediately after the parade.

GENERAL STRIKE BEGINS.

A general strike was ordered to celebrate the coming of the southerners. When it went into effect at noon there was every indication there would be widespread response by all classes of workers.

Great crowds gathered after the Nationalists arrived and numerous police charges were necessary to clear some of the streets.

Three Punjabis were shot during the disturbances. One of them died later.

With the railmen out on strike Shanghai is isolated, except by sea.

The Nationalist troops which entered the Chinese section of the city todya were plainclothes forces, known as "the Nationalist army behind the enemy lines." The main southern force was still a few miles from the city.

The Nationalist flag is flying over the postoffice and nearly all the Chinese shops. French authorities are erecting barbed wire barriers across the few streets not yet barricaded, bordering on the international settlement.

Joliet, Ill., March 21.—Two persons were killed and eight injured when a Yelloway bus, chartered by a squad of St. Louis naval reservists returning from a basketball tournament at the Great Lakes, skidded into a concrete abuttment at the end of a high bridge seven miles south of Joliet today.

POLICE PROBE STRANGLING OF LAWRENCE BOY

Lawrence, March 21 (A.P.).—Police today started a thorough investigation of the death of John Jackson, 12-year-old school boy, whose body was found dangling from a bedpost with a strap around his neck.

Although the official medical finding is that death was "probably accidental" police are following information that the boy is the last of six children who have died in this family.

A belief was expressed that the boy may have been attempting to duplicate a movie stunt and that the strap slipped about his neck breaking it with the force of his body in the fall. This conclusion has not satisfied the police, and two of the best trained officials in the department have been assigned to the case.

FITCHBURG MAN GETS SHOCK OF 500 VOLTS

Fitchburg, March 21—Captain James McGee, thirty-six, commander of the local national guard company, was shocked into insensibility today by more than 500 volts of electricity while at work at the Styles Building.

After a fellow employe, Robert Armour, received a slight shock while trying to save McGee, emergency crews from the fire department, the gas company and the local electric light plant went to work with respirators, with an even chance of saving him, according to doctors.

ARREST MADE, OUTFIT SEIZED, IN DRUG RAID

BOY CONFESSES TO MANY FIRES

North Attleboro, March 21 (A.P.). Marcolm Chandler, aged 17, High school student, was sent to Shirley Industrial School from the district court today after he confessed setting a $25,000 fire at the Junior High School here January 16, 1926, and a $10,000 fire at the estate of James Lavery six days later.

State Fire Inspector George C. Mansfield, who investigated Saturday the third fire starting near the company shops here, questioned Chandler, who confessed a series of fires after a long grilling.

Chandler could give no reason for his acts.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

The unexpected guest arrived. The lovely goddess of apple blossoms and snow drops came before we had prepared her welcome. Springtime and sunshine caught us up and whirled us into a panic. Overnight our clothing went out of season and our homes appeared shabby and dingy when she knocked at the door. So

We Bought Curtains

Down at the Seasonal Sales Store, 54 Chauncy Street—curtains that would match the fleecy clouds drifting by; as white and fresh and new as we could find. For curtains are the lovely lashes that veil the eyes of the house. And curtains are still holding festival there, with prices exceedingly low. Long straight curtains of beautiful hard twist voile with deep ruffled flounce, and tie backs complete for $1.19. Charming marquisette at $1.49, the dainty dotted muslins ($1.89) and the plain voiles with edges of color (guaranteed fast) for $2.75. But this is only a beginning. There are the cottage sets, and the draperies of heavier weave with artistic overhangings—curtains that will set your whole home singing—down at the Seasonal Sales Store.

And Speaking of Charm

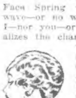
Have you been down yet to the Dexter Apparel Shop, on the 3rd floor of the Dexter Building, 453 Washington Street? It's one of my newest discoveries and the pride of Priscilla.

A wholesale house, Anne, which sells also at retail, but gives us the advantage of almost wholesale prices. A huge shop, with racks upon racks of new Spring coats and dresses—every color, every size and every style that's new. The latter ranging from $14.75 to $39.50. And yet they are not "stock" dresses. No, they are copies of original imports—distinctive models with a charm and individuality of their own. And it's a paradise for the woman of mature figure, for their particular specialty is adapting the slender lovely lines of the season to the larger size dresses.

The Matron

Who prefers to belong to the "young-matron" class rather than the "past generation" will be interested in the Spring display of hats now being shown at the Page Hat Shop, at 37 Temple Place. For there—ah there—she will find the line of youth in large head sizes. In sport hats, bankoks, crocheted viscas and the lovely ballibuntl. Hats from $9.50 to $18.50. And the model sketched, by the way, is one of the $18.50 hats—a stunning ballibuntl, dented and draped, bound in gros grain ribbon, with a smart fancy feather on the side. Moderate—at $15.50? Yes, decidedly so, for you would have to pay $35 for it in some of the other stores. But—please don't think that this shop specializes exclusively to the matron; for the girl will find her dashing sports creations there, too.

But Who Can



Face Spring with last year's wave—or no wave at all? Not I—nor you—or anyone who realizes the charm of beautifully waved hair. Not as long as L. Max (154 Boylston Street) is specializing in the smart swirl bob and that utterly lovely thing—the swirl permanent. Not as long as a girl can be endowed with soft, loose waves that wrap themselves delicately about the contour of her head with a winsome beauty that is irresistable. No—there's no need to falter—for if L. Max consents to give one a permanent wave at all, it is because he knows beyond all doubt that it will be safe, becoming and completely satisfactory. But phone first for consultation and appointment to Beach 2691.

There's Something Else

I want to tell folks, too—about coats for their faded and shabby furniture for the pieces creak in protest at being too long neglected—and look so very dismal when the Spring sun beams upon them. The Prospect Upholstering Company will upholster your things at prices surprisingly reasonable. With a free estimate, free delivery and the work most beautifully done. They have the tapestries, velours and mohairs produced by the best houses, the Belgian linens and cretonnes for artistic slip coverings. And they work quickly, usually within three days. It's a firm you want to remember—this Prospect Upholstering Company. They have two branches, one at 756 Dudley Street, Dorchester, Upham's Corner (Columbia 8856) and the other at 332 Somerville Avenue, Somerville, Union Sq. (Prospect 1506).

I Walked Straight

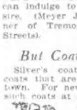
Into a shop today that would make your hair curl with delight. It's the Robicheau Smart Shop, in Room 408, of the Bigelow Kennard Building, 12 West Street. But don't let that address scare you, because though the coats and dresses are exceedingly smart, the prices are decidedly low. Why, I saw some of the most beautiful things for $13.75. Dresses you would never dream could even be made for such a price. The newest little models in every color and combination, about one hundred and fifty in all, I think. Don't miss them, Anne, whatever you do, don't fail to take time to see them.

Then coats, sport coats, kasha coats, twill coats and silk coats—$19.75, $22.50 and $35. For everybody—in all sizes. And tell our friends too, all of them, for this $13.75 price includes some marvelous dresses in the large and larger sizes.

Lemon, Anne,

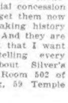
Is the great ingredient to use in this house cleaning-skin cleaning season. For lemon is the agent that digs out the dirt from the pores of the skin scrubs up the tissues until every bit of dead matter is removed and purifies the blood. Lemon whitens, bleaches and gives the skin that delicate, pearly sheen. So, I'm recommending lemon cream to you, Meyer Jonasson's Lemon Cream—for its double strength lemon, yet so blended with high grade oils that it cannot dry or irritate the skin. It's so smooth, fragrant and delightful you want to pat it on lavishly and revel in the clean, cool, stimulating reaction. And it comes in such a big, generous jar for 50c that you can indulge to your heart's desire. (Meyer Jonasson Co., corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets).

But Coats—Anne—



Silver's coats. They're the coats that are the talk of the town. For never have we seen such coats at such a price. Of Patou twill, in green, dark blue or tan. (Up to size 46.) Lined with an all silk satin that's guaranteed for two years' wear. And the lines, Anne, smart, becoming lovely lines that give you a thrill of delight every time you pass a mirror. Beautiful, beautiful coats for $24.75 while they last. But when they're gone—they are gone. No more such coats at that price. By a special concession of the manufacturer—by a special concession of Silver's we can get them now at a cost that's making history in the coat world. And they are so pretty, so smart that I want to run around telling every woman I see about Silver's Specialty Shop in Room 502 of the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place.

Patsy Went



Down to Leo Pass—that shop of uncommon coats and gowns, in the Nottingham Building, 25 Huntington Avenue. For Patsy loves style and firmly believes that distinctive clothing is the best investment for the modern girl. Especially if she can buy on budget terms and yet pay a moderate price for really exclusive things. So she is stepping out today in a stunning creation of black taffeta and creamy net lace ($35.00). And she's going to be bewitching tomorrow in a chic little navy crepe combined with soft, apple green printed crepe ($15.75). But best of all, she can pay for them easily, conveniently, a little at a time, and in a few weeks boast of the prettiest clothes in town—without owing anybody anything.

And Now

I want to introduce you to one of the nicest shops in town. Anne—allow me to present Mack's Specialty Shop, which lives up with our other friends on the 7th floor of the Ambassador Building, 41 Winter Street. Mack's Specialty Shop is where you will go when you want some truly beautiful material for lamp shades with free instructions for the making or shades already made up. It's where you will find unique boudoir lamps. A colonial gallant and his lady, at $4.75 a pair. It's where you can pick up fine silk Jersey underwear for almost a song and where you can get party favors that are different—candy baskets, place cards, butterflies, flags, or piquant nosegays. In fact, it's a shop you'll run into for dozens of things every time you find yourself on Winter Street.

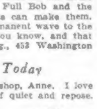
Things Are Happening at Mertin's

This week. Vitally important things—for the girl who leads in fashion, who marches boldly to greet the next smart mode and is among the first to take the latest step toward beauty. The newest bob—my dear—the very latest, newest and most advanced bobs are being created every hour. Those recently shown at Fifth Avenue's most exclusive shop. In fact, Mr. Mertin was there to see them, and reports that those two geniuses, Lantagne and Harri, have caught them to perfection.

One is the Wind-blown Swirl. No, that's not the wind-blown bob, but just enough different to make it more adapted to another type of head. Then there's the Lanvin Swirl, that sweeps around the head in a rippling curve distinctly Parisian. And finally the Patou Bob, the mode for the girl of freedom, for it shapes the hair into elusive lines without the aid of pins.

At Mertin's they specialize also in the other cuts of the hour. The Wind-blown Bob, the Lido Split, the Ritz Full Bob and the Butterfly Swirl—each one as beautiful as genius can make them. And they do marvelous work in adapting the permanent wave to the cut. They are real scalp and hair specialists, you know, and that does make a difference. (3rd floor, Dexter Bldg., 453 Washington Street.)

I Went to See Jean Brown Today

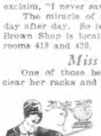


And learn the latest news on hats. I love that shop, Anne. I love the exquisite good taste of it, the atmosphere of quiet and repose. And I'm also delighted over your enthusiasm for Jean Brown. Of course you never saw prettier or more becoming hats, for everyone says the same thing. Do you know, I can hardly believe that you only paid $10 for that stunning hat you purchased there, and let me tell you—it's the best looking one I've seen on you for ages, quite worthy of her reputation.

Jean Brown is having a wonderful sale this week. I want all my friends to know about it and shop early, for they cannot resist those stylish hats at such tempting prices—$10, $12.00 and $15.00. And what a satisfaction it is to be perfectly fitted to just the hat you hoped for. Over and over again you will hear Jean Brown's customers exclaim, "I never saw such pretty hats at such reasonable prices."

The miracle of the right hat for each individual head goes on day after day. So tell your friends, and I'll tell mine—that the Jean Brown Shop is located in the Little Building, 80 Boylston Street, in rooms 419 and 420.

Miss Wiggin Is Having a Sale



One of those beautiful sales that fill her shop to overflowing, clear her racks and help us secure one of our "better" dresses at a cut cost. And when Miss Wiggin has a sale, it's a sale that starts off like a shot and swings around the goal post miles ahead of most sales you hear about.

The big price is to be $19.85—which includes dresses of $25, $27.50 and $29.75 values—and that really means dresses of the $30 and $35 classes. I don't need to tell you what these dresses of Miss Wiggin's are like, for if you live near Boston, its suburbs or within reach of the Hub at all, you know about Miss Wiggin and have known for the last ten years. But I will tell you that she has made innumerable trips to New York and selected every one of these models herself. She's gifted with second sight, anyway, as far as style goes, and manages to secure the best materials in the snappiest lines, with a weather eye out always for the mode which is authentically good and not a passing fancy.

And her hats are perfect darlings. They always are, but these new Spring models are even more so. So what? Well, they do so much for the girls who wear them. You'll find the Wiggin Shop of Hats, Coats and Gowns on the 4th floor of the Lawrence Building, 149 Tremont Street.

In Spring a Woman Must Sew

And our little lady-house needs new clothes for Easter, too. It's the psychological moment to take off her winter woolies and redecorate her in chintzy silks, crisp taffeta and the coolest of cool pongee. We're urged on by the instinct to scrub, paint, polish and sew—to make our homes fresh and beautiful. And we're helped on by the big Home Decorating Week at Thresher Brothers, Inc., at 19 Temple Place.

Taffeta—for the boudoir—for bed spreads, table drapes, and cushions is $1.75 and $2.85 a yard. The same fine quality used by upholsterers and interior decorators. Corean silk as exquisite as spun sun light is but $1.60. And pongee, the most practical and beautiful of them all is down to $1.20 a yard for the week. Fifty inches in width, wide enough for two draperies; with the 33-inch pongee from 65c to $1.65 a yard. Then there are the new spring rayons in vivid prints and plain colors, the silk and cotton fabrics, the printed silks and the airy fairy silks from China.

No need for dull, dreary homes this spring. And no need to put off our redecorating into the indefinite future, when Thresher Brothers' Silk Store has made special prices for this particular time.

Muscles Do Sag

When the zip goes out of the air. There's no doubt about it. These lovely langorous days leave us somewhat limp, with a lazy inclination to droop. Especially around the neck and under the chin, that fatal spot which first betrays advancing years. And confidentially—just between you and me—that's the reason the Garrity Ice Pack Contour Preserver is having such a big sale over at Filene's. That's the chin strap which removes the wrinkles and gives the fresh and youthful feeling. It lifts and rests the muscles of the face, while the ice keeps the skin firm.

It can be used with a strip of cotton saturated with a good astringent—or with the ice. Usually with both, for an hour's treatment with the astringent, followed by three or five minutes with ice brings the best results. We saw it in both the Beauty Parlor and the toilet goods department at Filene's, for only $1.25. And we saw something else too, my dear—a soft, fluffy thing that you would love. Imported puffs of swansdown—big breezy balls of gold, rose, turquoise blue and snow that will crush into the tiniest space in your bag, or spread like a gorgeous peacock upon your dresser. Some are $1.25, others around $3.00, but the latter are decorated with china dogs, or dolls, or painted handles in true Parisian style.

So Many People Complain

That housecleaning is hard on the hands; that they become rough with soaps and soap powders, the dirt works in and the skin becomes roughened and chapped until it's almost impossible to handle soft silks easily and sew daintily.

But we don't find it so. True—cleaning soaps are strong and sometimes powerfully determined to eat into the tissues of the hands. But a bottle of Campholine — Chandler's Campholine—banishes any discomfort or ill effects. You know Campholine, don't you? It's one of the most reliable remedies for chapps, chilblains, scalds, burns, mosquito bites or prickly heat. A cool soothing lotion which is delightful to use and almost a necessity to keep on hand around the house.

Everyone takes it along to the shore or up in the mountains in the summer when the sun and mosquitoes get in their work. You'll discover it in nearly every home during the winter to combat the frost and cold. And you'll see it come down from the kitchen shelf and out of the medicine closet during the housecleaning season, for it's the missing link between the dish pan and mop, the duster and cleanser, and the smooth delicately white hands of your afternoon hostess. Yes, Campholine is one of the requirements of the perfectly groomed man or woman. A simple remedy, without oil or grease, but a very reliable and splendid one. You'll find it at Gilchrist's, corner of Washington and Winter, for 25c a bottle.

Come Around With Me

To Evelyn's, at 8 Winter Street. For she has some especially special dresses at a special price of $13.75 which I want you to see. By the way, my very latest pride and joy came from Evelyn's—a lovely thing of navy georgette over tawny rose, with charming blouse effect and wide girdle with silk fringed sash ends. And I've discovered that the charm of Evelyn's dresses is that you feel at your best when you wear one, even though her prices are so low you're inclined to scold her for not making them higher. All those darling dresses for just $13.75—those stunning tailored sports models in silver haze and striped flannel for $10.95 and those wonderful high priced gowns for $18.50. But as long as she keeps those prices, we keep right on going to Evelyn's, and maybe she's right, after all.

When I Went

To Landfield's, on the same floor at 8 Winter Street, to get the prettiest pair of stockings in the city to wear with that dress, I discovered a big item of news for you. This week's special is for the girl who wants the sheer beauty of chiffon with the wear of a service silk. In other words—a service chiffon—all silk—all the way—with reinforced lisle foot and 4-inch cuff. An exceptionally beautiful stocking, of first quality silk, for $1.35 a pair, or three pairs for $3.75. And this includes the free repair service, which as you know, almost doubles the life of a stocking. Service Chiffon—that name is music to my ears, for I've dreamed of a delicate, filmy chiffon with the strength of a service silk. And now we can get it—at Landfield's.

Dora Landsberg

Took a flying trip to New York, after the Landsberg Hat Shop had its grand opening in Room 406, at 8 Winter Street—to catch the latest whispers from Paris through the salons of Fifth Avenue. And much to her delight, she found that the models offered there—in the most exclusive shops of the country, were exactly the same as they made in their own shop here in Boston. The Landsberg hats are exquisite, you know, and they ought to be, for Rose Landsberg has been making them for twenty-seven years, while Dora, her daughter, has inherited the same skill. They carry the newest fabrics—composee, "English Tissue" felts and imported viscas. And drape them with a delicate technique that is positive genius.

Oh, My Dear,

Here's a very present help in trouble. You can get that evening dress at Mendelsohn's, Room 506 in the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place, for $5 or $10. Now don't jump. It's perfectly true. Mendelsohn's is a unique shop which has evening gowns and wedding outfits for hire—marvelously beautiful gowns which transform the average girl into a radiant, sparkling Cinderella-at-the-Ball. For only about $5 an evening. And a gown far more wonderful than most of us could possibly afford to buy—except at the times when they clear out many of them at absurdly low prices. And that is the case right now. Evening gowns are selling there for $5 and $10 — exceptionally lovely gowns—slightly used, to be sure, but what is that, with cleansing houses on every corner?

Come To Attention

Anne. Nora A. Simpkins is making a special rate on permanent waves. "What—have the heavens fallen?" you will say. For Nora Simpkins' permanent wave is famous over the entire state, and never before has she given one for less than $25. The present price is $20, for a short time only. You see, she is the sole authorized instructor of the Eugene Method in Boston and practically all of New England, and anyone who has once enjoyed the luxury of her wave cannot see summer approaching without another. She does it personally, with the loose broad wave, in such a way that it cannot harm or discolor the hair. You'll love her shop, up in room 309, at 125 Tremont Street, for it has just been redecorated in the most cheerful canary yellow, set off with stunning black.

The Big Parade

Starts today in and out of Florence Daniels' Shop on the 7th floor of the Ambassador Building, 41 Winter Street. For Florence Daniels is having a sale of new spring dresses at $13.75. And that's an irresistible attraction. I don't believe she has an ordinary looking dress in the shop. I've never seen one, anyway, and if there is, it's not in the $13.75 group. No—these are all copies of exclusive and expensive models, with the belts, bows, flares and novelty tuckings—the new notes that we love. Of flat crepe or georgette and in every spring shade of tan, green, rose and blue, with a full selection of the reds, navy blues and blacks. We've been waiting for this sale and hoping against hope it would come before Easter—and here it is. Dresses for misses, sizes 14-20 for $13.75.

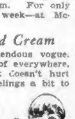
Did You Go

To the style show of the Renne Hat Salon last week? (7th floor Ambassador Building, 41 Winter Street). If you did, you came away in a dream of exquisite millinery. If you didn't, you'd better go up right away and get one of the model hats which were worn at the show. They are being sold for $12, and if you don't think they are the most marvelous values for $12, my name's not Priscilla. They are having a special price of $8.50 on the new felts, all draped and fitted to your head, and trimmed in any way the customer desires. Soft silky felts in the lip stick red, apple green, monkey skin, French blue, tan, yellow, orchid and black. And crocheted viscas are being made up for $12 draped to your head, the same as the felts, the plain viscas—not the ombre, the hand-painted or metal crocheted hoods, for they are more expensive.

I Know Now

Where women go to get those smart hats you see at bridge parties, teas and conventions. Those hats, which are modish in every line, yet have that poise—that dignity which gives a woman an air "to the manner born." I saw them at the Mac Mullen Hat Shop, Room 410 of the Lawrence Building, 149 Tremont Street, and recognized them as hats of true aristocracy. But—and here's the Special Edition E-x-t-r-a News—they are priced to $10 for the opening Spring sale. (A few sport models are even $7.50). Flower crowned—trimmed with ostrich feathers—cleverly handled roman stripe ribbon—hand cut felts—and even the larger hat with the gracefully drooping brim. For only ten dollars this week—at McMullen's.

Nultra Cold Cream



Is having a tremendous vogue. I hear it spoken of everywhere, and, of course, it doesn't hurt your Priscilla's feelings a bit to know that one of her favorite creams is gaining such a fine reputation. It's the purity of it that counts, Anne—a purity so perfect that every bit of the cream is absorbed by the skin, making a real food for the tissues. It contains no animal fat and none of the petroleum products—just the ingredients that the skin needs most. And that is why it's such a splendid cleansing and night cream, why it softens and freshens the skin and is so exceptionally soothing. Oh, we couldn't keep house without Nultra Cold Cream, and hundreds of others couldn't, either. At any of the S. S. Pierce Stores for $1.00 a jar.

You're Out of Virozol

Then straight you go to R. H. White's, my lady, and renew your stock. Goodness, don't get low on Virozol, and get the products complete while you are at it. The Virozol Almond Cream ($1.00) to remove the dust of the day and cleanse each tiny crevice and pore. Then Virozol Swedish Face Bath ($1.25) to rejuvenate the skin and repair the damage of another day—to quicken the blood, stimulate the muscles and put every tiny nerve and tissue in perfect condition. And learn to use Virozol Face Powder, too, for it's wonderfully velvety on the face and clings with a texture of rose petals. Yes, R. H. White Company carry all three, and it's well to get them together.

UNDERWOOD CO. IN NEW HOME

After twenty-six years in the down town section of Boston the Underwood Typewriter Company has moved to the Statler Building, where the new offices occupy the entire second floor.

The Underwood Company opened its first office in Boston in 1901 on Devonshire street. Later the company moved to larger quarters across the street. The company moved again in 1916, occupying a Franklin street office until now.

RANK WITH BEST OFFICES.

The new quarters in the Statler Building rank with the finest and best equipped typewriter offices in America. It occupies over 10,000 square feet. In front are the general offices with a display of the company's products. On one side to the rear are the accounting and employment departments; on the opposite side the repair department. The shipping department and storage rooms extend across the rear. Between the front office and the shipping department is an attractive corridor.

In the new office a business show will be conducted during the week of March 21 to 26, from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily. All Underwood products will be on display. There will be typewriters, including many special machines for billing, tabulating, card and stencil writing, continuous fanfold billers, bookkeeping machines, portable typewriters, featuring the new model with standard four-bank keyboard.

TYPISTS TO ATTEND.

Demonstrations will be given by Albert Tangora, three times world's champion typist, and Stella Willins, world's amateur champion typist.

A feature of the exhibit will be a display of paintings showing the progress of writing from the picture writing of the Stone Age to the fast typewriting of today.

An invitation to this business show is extended to the business men of Boston, secretaries and typists and all interested in modern writing and accounting methods.

Couple, Divorced 32 Years Ago, Remarry

Greenwich, Ct., March 21 (Universal).—Divorced thirty-two years ago and reunited in marriage!

That's the romantic story of Frank Broadsky, New York real estate man, and Mrs. Ida Hallamore, also of New York. They were married here by a justice of the peace.

Following the divorce thirty-two years ago Mrs. Broadsky married a Mr. Hallamore, whom she later divorced.

Uniform success has marked the career of this talented young artist, whose lovely contralto voice was for nine seasons a feature of Metropolitan Opera Company performances. More recently she has entered the still larger field of concert work, where her lovely and expressive voice has won for her thousands of admirers. Hear her in person. Then go to the nearest Victor dealer and ask to hear "Carmen" (1102). Both are Jeanne Gordon.

EX-DRY AGENT IS ARRESTED

Providence, March 21.—The first arrests in connection with the 21 indictments returned by the Federal Grand Jury in what is expected to result in one of New England's biggest liquor exposes, were made today.

Joseph P. Kelley, former national prohibition agent and member of the State Assembly, and Joseph E. Gendron, hotel owner and wealthy resident of West Warwick, were arrested on indictment warrants, charging conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition laws. Both men were taken before Federal Judge Morris, where they furnished bail.

THE NEW health food is called "chlosterol," and contains what is practically the pure Vitamin D, a substance called ergosterol. It can be made cheaply, and an ounce of it would be enough to keep you healthy from birth to death.

Wonderful opportunity there for some able adviser—especially if he really distributes the ergosterol.

HEALTH NEWS and educational news are the really important kinds of news. "Give light and the people will find their own way," as Dante said. Give health and they will have energy to work well.

Morals change and return to normal with time. Health and knowledge are what count.

AN OLD man in Illinois sends one dollar to a woman in Indiana, saying, "I stole half a water melon from your father sixty years ago, when I was thirteen. I am on my way to Heaven and do not want that melon standing in my way. Here is the money; forgive and forget."

THE QUESTION is, can you buy forgiveness from Heaven at the last minute, when "on your way?" A Mohammedan writes that his co-religionists do not pray for Heaven. They say in their prayers to Allah, "We pray to you because we know you are great and good, deserving praise. We ask nothing in return." That seems more dignified than everlasting begging, and more tactful.

NEWTON DIED 200 years ago yesterday, and it is not necessary to specify which Newton. The brain that discovered and formulated the law of gravitation will outlive in human history all other names.

Great inventions, works of art, in music, painting, writing, that seem so important to us, will 100,000 years hence be classed with cave drawings, as interesting reminders of the infancy of our race. But these eleven words will last, in Eternal Truth, "directly as the mass, and inversely as the square of the distance."

FEW OF US even try to realize the vastness and smallness of this universe, in which we vibrate for an instant, and vanish.

Everyone is familiar with the astronomer's yardstick. They measure cosmic distances in "light years," the distance that light travels in 365 days, going 186,000 miles a second.

A. N. WHITEHEAD, in his "Science and Modern World," reminds you of a "standard of length" used by scientists in chemistry and biology, dealing with the infinitely small. They take a centimetre, one hundredth part of a metre, divide that centimetre into one hundred million parts, and one of these parts is their measure. And, says Whitehead "in connection with atoms, that measure is uncomfortably great."

PROFESSOR HANKINS, of Smith College, says the colored race is on the wane in America, birth rate decreasing, death rate increasing. Life in cities, not suited to the African race, is the cause, he says.

Professor Hankins believes that shortly the Negro will cease to be important as a separate factor in the population.

MEN, BLACK, brown, white or yellow, adjust themselves mentally to any environment, with ease. But it is otherwise physically. The Negro deteriorates, physically, in city life, and so do some of the white races, compared with others. It depends on how long their ancestors have been standing the city strain.

DESCENDANTS of Britons that were racing through the swamps, their stomachs painted blue with woad, do not endure city life as well as their Jewish fellow-citizens that lived in cities thousands of years ago. That is one reason why the death rate among Jewish children is lower, in cities, than among other children.

There is comfort in this news for colored people that believe in reincarnation, the theory that when we die we come back here to live in other bodies. If the various colored races disappear, their spirits will have to inhabit white bodies and brains, when they return. That will be more comfortable, on this planet of selfish white supremacy.

HEATED BY GAS FUEL

The NEW HOME of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company

100 ARLINGTON ST.
AT COLUMBUS AVE. & STUART ST.

An Invitation

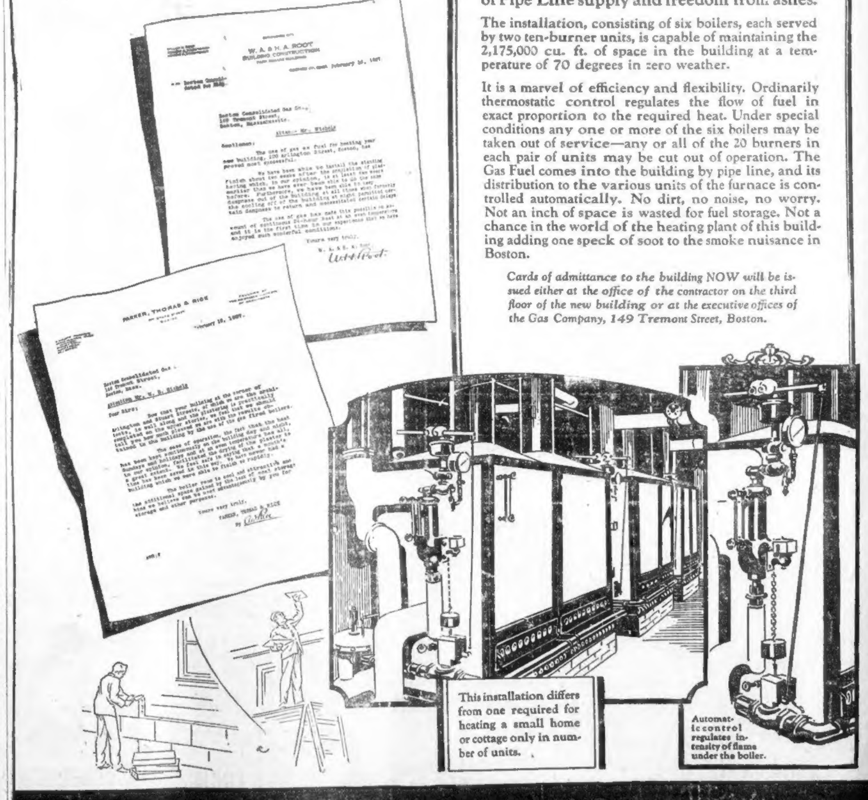
ARCHITECTS, building owners, contractors, engineers, realtors and others interested in the development and management of office buildings and industrial plants are cordially invited to inspect the Gas Fuel Heating Equipment in our new building—now—while it is being used to help dry out the masonry, concrete and plaster in the floors, walls and partitions.

This installation is an oustanding example of the most modern type of heating equipment, and it will afford you a most interesting opportunity to familiarize yourself with the many advantages of Gas Fuel, the surety of its supply, its efficiency as a heat producing element, its cleanliness, and its flexibility and ease of control—not to mention the saving it effects in labor and space because of Pipe Line supply and freedom from ashes.

The installation, consisting of six boilers, each served by two ten-burner units, is capable of maintaining the 2,175,000 cu. ft. of space in the building at a temperature of 70 degrees in zero weather.

It is a marvel of efficiency and flexibility. Ordinarily thermostatic control regulates the flow of fuel in exact proportion to the required heat. Under special conditions any one or more of the six boilers may be taken out of service—any or all of the 20 burners in each pair of units may be cut out of operation. The Gas Fuel comes into the building by pipe line, and its distribution to the various units of the furnace is controlled automatically. No dirt, no noise, no worry. Not an inch of space is wasted for fuel storage. Not a chance in the world of the heating plant of this building adding one speck of soot to the smoke nuisance in Boston.

Cards of admittance to the building NOW will be issued either at the office of the contractor on the third floor of the new building or at the executive offices of the Gas Company, 149 Tremont Street, Boston.



This installation differs from one required for heating a small home or cottage only in number of units.

Automatic control regulates intensity of flame under the boiler.

SMART FARCE WITH MENJOU AT THE 'MET'

By LEO GAFFNEY.

ADOLPHE MENJOU'S "Evening Clothes" at the Metropolitan is a film farce that suits him to form-fitting perfection. Its story, by Andre Picard and Yves Mirande, is a nimble trifle of the Paris boulevards that rolls itself out without a wrinkle; its players saunter through it like reasonable human beings, and its situations, though well spiced for the sophisticated, are nicely discreet and always in good taste. The direction, Luther Reed's, is far and away better than "The Ace of Cads," "New York" or anything else he has ever handled.

Virginia Valli

The action gets well into gear before subtitles are introduced: You see Virginia Valli as a bartered bride sold out by an impecunious papa to Menjou whom you first meet as a country gentleman of great fortune, but decidedly unmanicured and very much in need of a shave.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

Incautiously proceeding as an ungroomed bridegroom, the gentleman of the soil has a "wife in name only" on his hands. His method of dealing with this unfortunate state of affairs is simple and direct. Settling the best portion of his estate on the unwooed wife, he departs for Paris and the gay "night school" course that shall make him a boulevardier and, therefore, a worthy Gallic husband.

It is with this mode of education that the play mostly concerns itself and which provides the gist of its entertainment. There are several misadventures in a gay restaurant in which you come upon no less a person than Noah Beery giddily masquerading as a baron. It is here also that you encounter Louise Brooks, in a frizzly bob, doing her best acting to date as a lady of faint moral scruples.

ADROIT FILMPLAY

Others whom you meet in similar jaunty fashion are Lilyan Tashman and Lido Manetti, a pair of easy opportunists who prey upon the Menjou bankroll until it has disappeared, leaving the stranded gentleman with nothing but one suit of "evening clothes" and an acute appetite.

As always, the work of the star is faultless, but adroit direction and an unusually authoritative scenario bring a freshness to "Evening Clothes" that place it among the season's delights.

On stage, the Metropolitan presents John Murray Anderson's "Stone Age Follies," an amusing travesty on prehistoric notions; Walter Pontius, lyric tenor; Del Castillo plays a sugary arrangement of Rubinstein's "Kamenio Ostrow" on the organ, and the orchestra furnishes "The Clock Store" as its weekly specialty.

YOUNG PIANIST IN CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

A pianist of distinct talent and unusual promise was discovered in he concert, yesterday afternoon at Steinert Hall, by Bernardo Siegel, young Brazilian whom a large audience heard with pleasure and applauded heartily.

This musician is a mere lad of fifteen, and he presented at the piano a charming contrast of the sincerity and poise of a much older artist with the frankness and buoyancy to be expected in a young man who has not been spoiled by the sophistication of artistic circles.

Siegel's program, which included Bach's concerto in the Italian Style, Beethoven's F major sonata, op. 10, and shorter and lighter musical fare, was admirably adapted to his capabilities and years. It is absurd to demand "serious" programs from youthful prodigies, who would have little understanding of what they were playing. And on the rare occasions when a boy or girl pianist plays profound musical works with intelligence and a perception of the emotional and musical content of the pieces at hand, the result seems uncanny and unnatural.

During a moving performance last year of the eloquent Chopin "Funeral March" sonata by a fourteen-year-old pianist, one felt that the poor child had been robbed for the heritage of a carefree childhood. Siegel's playing of yesterday was not of this type at all, but it was tinged with healthy exuberance.

He displayed admirable mastery of the style of the Bach concerto and made much of the early Beethoven sonata. Technically he was equal to the demands the music made upon him, and his nochalance before his auditors was refreshing. Whatever nervousness he may have had was not reflected in his playing.

MILTON SILLS FILM AT TWO OLYMPIAS

After giving complete satisfaction as "The Sea Hawk," Milton Sills now takes up the duties of "The Sea Tiger," his new film at the Washington and Scollay Olympias. And his punishing career continues with great destruction for those reckless "villains" who dare question his ominous scowl and his brawny, studio-trained right arm. In this one he is a simple, blunt fellow, a fisherman, but with sufficient strength of character to go about "protecting" a sweetheart and a weaker, younger brother to the extent that he must beat up Joe Bonomo, professional strong man, to the limit of the latter's patience.

Alice White

Besides this very rending battle of shredded shirtings, there is the picturesque locale of the Canary Islands from which the tiny fishing boats depart, all aslant, to dip their sails against the horizon as the course of true love runs anything but smooth.

The ladies in the case are Mary Astor, required, for the sake of the surroundings, to be far from placid, and Alice White, as a vixenish Spanish actress who has all the fiery nature ever expected of any fictitious Spanish actress from Carmen down. Miss White is a newcomer to the screen and gives a splendid account of herself.

After several more encounters of varying importance and intensity, the star makes away with the particular lady intended for him by the script and everything smoothes out for the happy ending, but not before some delicious comedy moments have been pleasantly contributed by Arthur Stone.

Various short films and vaudeville balance the rest of the bill at both houses.

LEATRICE JOY AT MODERN

Leatrice Joy, haircut and all, has a dashing time of it as "Nobody's Widow," an Avery Hopwood comedy that is now showing in film form at the Modern and Beacon. "Dashing" is quite right, for the chief figure in Mr. Hopwood's dramas generally is kept on the move partly nearly all the time. The action starts with Miss Joy, as a quickly disillusioned bride fleeing in great haste to America from an English husband who had suddenly discovered a definite admiration for an alluring Parisienne.

California is her next stop, where she poses as a widow and is more or less enjoying the sensation when who should pop up again but her British husband. To forestall the wagging tongues of friends, the pair decide to renew romantic relations with an eye to be re-married after a short courtship.

But the tongues would wag and, for the best purposes of farce, there is the double-crossing feminine friend who must manage to mix up the bedrooms in order that certain things will seem quite naughty. Following the best traditions, these things are attended to with promptness and eclat, thus, in the end, allowing for everything to unravel quite smoothly with nobody hurt at all!

Charles Ray, Phyllis Haver and David Butler ably support the star.

The companion piece on the double bill is a film treatment of the Hal Reid melodrama, "Driven from Home." It is a sentimental heart wringer of a young lady whose dad orders her from the house for marrying the wrong man. But of course he relents in the end. Virginia Lee Corbin and Ray Hallor have the principal roles.

'CONSTANT NYMPH' COMES TO HOLLIS NEXT MONTH

"The Constant Nymph" will open at the Hollis on April 18 and will probably finish the season at that playhouse. The New York cast will remain intact for the Boston engagement. Next season Beatrix Thomson will be featured in the title role. She was brought from England to create the title role.

'SENSATION SEEKERS' MAKING THE GRADE

PRIMROSE PAIR

In "Sensation Seekers," at the New Boston, Huntley Gordon begs Billie Dove help in drowning a most boyant thirst.

GOLDEN JUBILEE CONCERT BY SCHUMANN-HEINK

Ernestine Schumann-Heink gave a concert at Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon to commemorate her fifty years as a public musical performer. The house was crowded with eager listeners, and the enthusiasm evinced made the occasion a notable one.

Her program consisted of standard songs and arias and a group of popular numbers at the close. In these pieces, and in the extra numbers with which the program was liberally sprinkled, the great contralto sang with her accustomed artistry, which makes a voice of a woman approaching seventy sound ever fresh.

Throughout the concert Mme. Schumann-Heink was on exceedingly intimate terms with her listeners, occasionally making humorous remarks in her familiar fashion. Miss Florence Hardeman played two groups of violin solos, and Stewart Will accompanied both performers on the piano.

TWO OLD-TIME SHIPS IN 'CAPT. SALVATION' FILM

Two square-rigged sailing vessels —a type of ship now almost obsolete—will be seen in "Captain Salvation," a Cosmopolitan Production adapted from Frederick William Wallace's sea story of the same name, which is now being filmed under the direction of John S. Robertson.

According to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer experts, there are only a half dozen square riggers on the whole Pacific Coast. These old boats, idle for years, are used only for motion picture purposes.

Every port in the Pacific Coast was scoured for the old-time craft and then another hunt was started for veteran sailors. Good sailors were needed, as the vessels were to sail out to sea for a period of more than two weeks. The safety of the entire company depended upon the efficiency of these old salts.

"Captain Salvation" tells the story of a young divinity student who gives up the ministry and becomes the most feared skipper on the Nova Scotia coast.

DIRECTOR IS FILM'S STAR AT BOSTON

Lois Weber, a woman director of films, has made a photoplay called "Sensation Seekers," now at the Keith-Albee Boston, which is one of the year's creditable pictures.

The story, that of a fresh outbreak of the restless "younger generation," skims along with unusual sincerity and restraint for such a theme. There are gay parties and much smoking and drinking by the type of young ladies who could do very well with a good, brisk spanking, but Miss Weber has inspired sane performances in all her players and the true spirit of this Ernest Pascal yarn remains.

Billie Dove, Huntley Gordon and Raymond Bloomer have the principal roles. Without exception they handle them admirably and portray their respective characters in the manner of everyday life. It is only toward the last that they are called upon to furnish a bit of hysteria, which occurs when Miss Weber, as a concession to certain film standards, is forced to plunge them into the sea as "punch" scene in a yacht wreck.

With the single exception of this cruise of the studio ship, there is smooth directorial sailing. The miniature shipwreck is too obvious.

The plot sketches the romance of "Egypt," a giddy society girl, and an earnest young clergyman. But there is also a more or less gay dilletante with a yacht, a furious thirst and plentiful means to slake it. A recklessly decided trip aboard the rakish vessel with its high-stepping owner ends in the typical movie disaster, beforementioned, and the way is left clear for a "rescue" and clear forgiveness by the zealous minister of the gospel.

The vaudeville portion of the bill is headed by West and McGinty in their comedy of errors, "A Million Builders' Blunders."

ALL-RUSSIAN PROGRAM AT PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY

Stuart Mason, leader of the People's Symphony Orchestra, returned to the conductor's desk, after an absence of three weeks, for the concert in Jordan Hall yesterday afternoon. He led the orchestra in a program which included Glinka's "Kamarinskaja," Moussorgsky's prelude to "Khowantchina," Rimsky Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumble Bee," from "The Legend of Tsar Sultan" and Tschaikowsky's fifth symphony.

Olga Alvierino, soprano, was the assisting artist, singing "Tatiana's Letter" from Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin," to complete the all-Russian character of the program. A large audience applauded the per-

EVELYN BRENT AT FENWAY

Held over from last week, "McFadden's Flats" continues to be the featured attraction at the Fenway until Wednesday. Charlie Murray, Chester Conklin and Edna Murphy have the principal roles in this energetic comedy of life and love in the tenement district.

The opposite feature is "Love's Greatest Mistake" with Evelyn Brent, William Powell and Josephine Dunn.

Starting Wednesday, Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes will be seen in "An Affair of the Follies," an interesting story of stage folk and their occasional difficulties with the tired business man of repute.

On the same bill with "An Affair of the Follies," Madge Bellamy will be seen in a considerably revamped version of the old heart-wringer, "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl." In the more up-to-date treatment, Bertha has very little to do with the sweatshop of the original

Reginald Denny to Star In "Heaven Forbid"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

LOS ANGELES, March 21.—Reginald Denny has recovered his health sufficiently to return to the screen in "Heaven Forbid," an original story by Edwin Justus Mayer. After the experiences Mr. Denny suffered, flirting with death in the movies need have no additional terrors for him. Few people outside of his immediate family know how nearly he laid down his life in the interest of celluloid entertainment.

He was playing a scene in which a girl at the wheel of an automobile was supposed to break all speed laws. Well, she did and more. She crashed into a tree and injured Mr. Denny so severely that for several weeks he was unconscious. He no more than conquered the fractured skull than an operation for appendicitis laid him low for months.

Reginald Denny.

ONE OF THOSE CURIOUS, ironic twists of life occurred in the death of Charlie Mack, the young actor who was killed in a Riverside automobile accident a few days ago. The day before he went to his death, Young Mack died on the screen in the same manner in which he lost his life in real life.

He only had about one more day's shooting on the picture, so that, contrary to reports, it will not be necessary for Warner Brothers to remake the film.

Young Mack had one of the most romantic and interesting careers of anyone on the screen. He was a prop boy and one day Griffith, seeing him sweep the floor, took his broom away from him and posed him in a picture. He did so well that he was given a part in "Dream Street," and from that time on became one of the best screen actors.

SOME YEARS AGO, not more than five or six to be exact, a little girl named Clara Horton, with big brown eyes and light hair, attracted considerable attention on the screen. She played opposite Jack Pickford in a number of his Paramount pictures. Then for some time we only saw Miss Horton spasmodically and I have often wondered why she has not appeared in more conspicuous roles.

Only yesterday I heard that Sidney Chaplin, after seeing a test of her, decided to cast her in the leading role in "The Race Track Tout," his next picture for Warner Brothers, and incidentally his last.

There is a rumor that he will go to United Artists, but he told me that he had made no plans as yet. It will be interesting to see if Miss Horton is still as lovely as she was a few years ago. At that time she couldn't have been over sixteen years old, so she is still in the ingenue class.

Custard Pie That President Likes

PROBABLY you read with interest in this month's Cosmopolitan what Elizabeth Jaffrey, for seventeen years housekeeper of the Executive Mansion, says about President Coolidge's taste in cookery.

The White House cook could not seem to turn out custard pie that exactly suited the President, so Mrs. Coolidge wrote to an inn in Massachusetts for the recipe of a custard pie which the President had eaten and particularly enjoyed.

This was the recipe repeatedly used in the White House. I'm sure you'll be as interested in trying out the recipe as we were in the Martha Lee Kitchen and I know you'll have just as satisfactory results. The only difference of opinion in our culinary camp was over the lack of flavoring.

I contended that the nutmeg which was sprinkled on top of the pie when it was removed from the oven gave it sufficient flavor. Helen contended that nutmeg, vanilla or lemon should be stirred into the custard mixture. Anyway, here is the recipe:

PRESIDENTIAL CUSTARD PIE—¾ cup sugar, 1 rounding tablespoon of flour. Mix sugar and flour. Add a pinch of salt, 2 eggs (beaten), 1½ cups of milk.

Pour into pie plate lined with thin layer of pie crust not previously baked.

Bake in oven until custard is "set." Sprinkle a little grated nutmeg on top when removed from the oven.

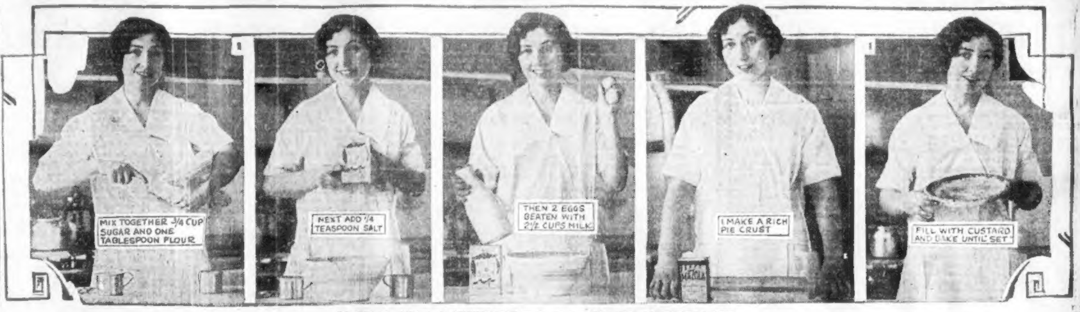
No directions are given for the pie crust, but here is an excellent, rich paste which I am sure would be acceptable.

PIE PASTE—Mix and sift two cups of pastry flour with ½ teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon of salt. Work in one-third cup of lard, using the tips of the fingers. Add ice water, a little at a time, until the mixture is right to roll.

Toss on a lightly floured board, pat, roll out, measure a third of a cup of butter and then divide that into thirds. Dot the paste over with one-third of these thirds and roll up like a jelly roll. Then pat it flat, dot with another third of the butter and again roll up like a jelly roll. Repeat, using the last third of the butter. Set away on the ice before using.

To peel oranges easily, pour boiling water over them. Let them stand for five minutes, and the white lining comes away with the skin. Then slice and put in ice box to cool. Grapefruit may be pared in this way also.

To remove tea stains from china, dampen the spots with warm water. Then rub over with plenty of sale mixed with baking soda.



MIX TOGETHER ¾ CUP SUGAR AND ONE TABLESPOON FLOUR
NEXT ADD ¼ TEASPOON SALT
THEN 2 EGGS BEATEN WITH 2½ CUPS MILK
I MAKE A RICH PIE CRUST
FILL WITH CUSTARD AND BAKE UNTIL SET

Helpful Hints

To scale fish easily, lay the fish flat in a large dish or pan and pour boiling water over it. Then take it out quickly and plunge into cold water. The scales will come off easily with a little rubbing. A coarse grater is better than a knife for scaling fish as it protects the hand.

Butter, oil or pure glycerin rubbed all over very fresh eggs will keep them fresh for some time.

Egg test: Place an egg in a deep pan of cold water. If it lies on its side, it is strictly fresh; if it stands at an angle, it is three or four days old; if it stands on one end, it is ten days old. An egg that floats on top is seldom fit for use.

To cut hot shortcake or brown bread, wind a string around it, cross the hands, holding an end in each hand, and draw gently together until the bread or cake is separated.

When measuring molasses, grease the cup lightly or flour it. Then each drop of liquid will come out.

A delicious cake filling is made with one-half cup pulverized sugar, 1 cup grated pineapple and 1 teaspoonful lemon juice, thoroughly blended.

When cake is scorched, grate it lightly with nutmeg grater instead of scraping with a knife. This leaves a smooth surface for frosting.

Scatter bits of dried lemon peel among cookies when putting them in the jar and they will have a nice flavor.

Placing a freshly cut piece of apple in the cake tin helps keep cake moist and fresh.

When frying doughnuts, put a few whole cloves in the kettle of fat for a nice flavor.

Pie crust should be made the day before using and kept in a cold place. This makes it tender and flaky. Roll pastry lightly so that the air will not be pressed out.

To brown pies or tarts, brush over lightly with sweet milk before putting them in the oven.

How to Prepare a Barbecue of Pork

To make a barbecue of pork take a five-pound piece of fresh eastern rk and score the surface very lightly. Bake for ½ hour, basting frequently with 1 cup vinegar. Dust all with flour and remove to a gas broiler.

Cook with low flame in the broiler, allowing 20 minutes to the pound with broiler door standing open about an inch. As the loin commences to brown nicely, baste with the following mixture: One and one-half cups boiling water, ½ cup sau- [illegible] ¼ cup vinegar and 2 tablespoons brown sugar.

About 15 minutes before removing from the oven season the loin with salt and pepper. Serve on hot platter, garnished with parsley.

In her weekly talks "over the air" on the seasoning secrets of famous chefs, Mrs. Julian Heath, well-known cooking expert, is giving a special [illegible] the art of leftovers

Left-overs can be made as attractive as original dishes, Mrs. Heath declares. The main secret in utilizing them is to give them a new and different flavor. Sauces are very helpful in this, and a large number of them can be employed.

One seasoning which is very useful [illegible] ed mustard. In blended (prepared) mustard the mustard flavoring is combined with other spices to make a complete seasoning. This liquid flavoring may be added to many dishes, stews, soups and vegetables to give them rich flavor in serving them a second time.

THE BUCKWHEAT "KICK" MEN WANT

Her famous recipe with one ingredient added

Have you ever watched a man's eye when his teeth close on the first bite of really fine buckwheats? Good ones are scarce—but, oh boy, when he gets them!

These cold mornings—how men do long for that old-fashioned buckwheat taste! It's to give them the rich "tang" they want, that so many women right now are serving their husbands and sons, light fragrant cakes made with Aunt Jemima Prepared Buckwheat Flour.

The recipe that has made Aunt Jemima famous, ready-mixed with just enough choice buckwheat flour—that's what you get in the yellow package. To give you that special "kick" of buckwheat at its best, we use only the pick of the crops from certain chosen sections.

Watch your husband's smile when he first tastes Aunt Jemima's Buckwheat cakes. Plan now to test this famous recipe, ready-mixed—Aunt Jemima Prepared Buckwheat Flour in the yellow package. And don't forget those southern pancakes with the old-time plantation flavor—cakes you make with Aunt Jemima Pancake Flour in the red packages.

Ask your grocer for two Aunt Jemima packages—one yellow, one red.

Coupons for valuable premiums come in every Aunt Jemima package.

"My husband called it the best meal I ever cooked!"

"ONE day I heard of putting Gulden's in my cooking. I tried it in beef loaf, and mixed it in before I served my spinach. The results were delicious—something new in flavoring. My husband said it was the best dinner I'd ever cooked."

Thousands of housewives know this new, simple way of seasoning. It is the method used by chefs in the large hotels, where foods must have a deft, delicate taste. Just a few golden drops of Gulden's mixed in when you cook vegetables, spread over meats before they are roasted or broiled, and you will be astonished at the rich, delicious flavor your foods will have.

Gulden's is a blending of the world's finest mustard seeds with delightful spices. Only in Gulden's do you get this perfect combination of rich, mellow spices with the lively little mustard seed. This is why it's the one complete seasoner for cooking—tasty, not harsh or biting. It comes to you, all ready to use.

Hang up your dishpan

10 minutes sooner

TO Chipso every minute of your time is precious. So Chipso helps you to do your dishes in one-third less time. Chipso gives you a brand-new half hour each day!

Why the Chipso method is so easy:

Chipso is fine clean flakes of real soap, not a powder! When you put a tablespoon of Chipso in your dishpan and pour on the hot water, you have fine working suds instantly, without a bit of beating.

Wash your glass and silver first. While you're rinsing and drying them, soak the china in the same suds. Chipso will dissolve most of the grease and food traces into the water before you even touch the dishes.

Then while you dry the china, soak the kitchen utensils, adding more Chipso if the water needs it.

This new Chipso way costs less than one cent a day. There are two convenient sizes of Chipso's blue-and-orange box at your grocer's.

Helpful Hints on Spring Cleaning

"I AM going to start housecleaning next week," writes a lady i nWollaston, "and want to do some of the heavier tasks first, among them the cleaning of some thick rag rugs. Can these be possibly cleaned at home?"

They surely can, dear lady, providing that you have time, patience, and a pretty good supply of elbow grease.

First give the rugs a thorough beating to remove the dust. Then plunge them into cold water and spread them on a clean cement floor, or on the back piazza if you're lucky enough to have one.

Make a strong soap solution by mixing two bars of white naphtha soap grated fine with a 12-ounce package of soap flakes, one-half cup of salt, one-half cup of vinegar and four gallons of water.

Place all these ingredients on a boiler on the stove, bring to the boiling point and boil one minute. With a clean broom, scrub the rugs thoroughly with this solution first on one side and then on the other.

Rinse several times in clean, tepid water and press out all the water you possibly can. If the rugs are too heavy to rinse in a tub, place them on a strong wire clothesline and turn the hose on them. Hang them straight and let them dry. A windy, sunny day is of course best for this work.

I have a wonderfully helpful book of housecleaning helps that I would be very happy to send you if you'd like to have it. It contains reliable directions for cleaning everything from soiled sofa pillow tops to pianos, not forgetting a magic method of restoring soiled wallpaper to its pristine beauty.

Some Thrifty Meals Make Happy Families

Try this inexpensive and flavorful recipe for Hamburg and watch the smiles light up the faces of your family: One and one-half pounds chopped round steak, one and one-half tablespoons prepared mustard, one-quarter cup boiling water, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon onion juice.

Add the water to the chopped steak. Add the onion juice and seasoning. The spices blended with the mustard will give a delicious, different flavor to the meat. Make into cakes and broil with a hot flame. Let stand in a warm place for several moments. And add butter to the meat juices which will form a delicious gravy.

Fruit Lunches Good for Those Who Reduce

A doctor who specialized in the treatment of digestive troubles often recommended fruit lunches to patients who suffered from the effects of excessive weight.

Invariably they become thinner and healthier as a result of this diet. They are allowed a generous breakfast, but at lunch only as much as they liked of any one kind of fruit; nothing else except a drink of water.

Canned pineapple, because it contains abundantly vitamines A B and C and is rich in mineral, would make one of the most satisfying and appetizing of these noonday meals.

Electric Toaster Gives a Party

WE'VE talked of parties that centered around electric waffle irons, electric chafing dishes and grills—not to mention electric percolators—and now it remains for the electric toaster to give a party. Unique, yet simple and interesting refreshments can be served in the making of which the shining toaster plays the all-important part.

Firstly, fortify yourself with some nice bread, either the usual shaped loaf or a round loaf, and be sure that your electric toaster is in good working order and that you have a sharp corrugated edged bread knife that will cut the bread straight. Of course, I hope that you have an electric percolator, but if not, coffee can be made for the party in the kitchen.

For all I'm going to suggest for our party menu is coffee and toasted sandwiches. But such sandwiches!

Fillings can be prepared before the guests arrive and placed in bowls in the ice box. The toast, of course, is made right at the table at the time of serving. In fact, after the sandwiches have made the rounds once, it's fun to have each guest make his own toast and spread his own sandwich.

There's a delicious new sandwich spread that has a cream cheese base or you can make your own by creaming together two cream cheeses or one-quarter pound of bulk cream cheese and two tablespoons of cream.

Add salt and paprika to taste and two tablespoons of chopped nuts. Another filling is made of chopped boiled ham mixed with mayonnaise and chopped stuffed olives. Still another is a cream cheese, chopped dates, chopped nuts and a sprinkling of lemon juice.

For a considerable company it's a good idea to have two loaves of bread one white and one whole wheat or graham, and combine the two in one sandwich with the filling between. A more elaborate party can, of course, be built around the many cream dishes which are so delicious served on toast.

Chicken a la King is hard to improve upon and can be prepared ahead of time by this recipe.

Chicken a la King—Have a chicken cut to fricassee. Cook it in a small amount of boiling water until tender. Remove the meat from the bones and cut into thick pieces about two inches long. At the same time have on hand one green pepper, one pimento, two cups of chicken broth, two or three tablespoons of flour, one-half pound of fresh mushrooms, two egg yolks, one-half cup butter, one cup of rich milk and salt, pepper and paprika.

About half an hour before the refreshments are to be served, the hostess can slip out to her kitchen saute the mushrooms and add them to the cut chicken. Then blend the butter and flour and add the chicken broth, slowly, and the milk. When this is cooked through, add it to the chicken and mushrooms.

Chop the green pepper and the pimento fine and add them. Also season to taste. Just before serving beat slightly the two egg yolks, add a tablespoon of the other mixture to them and return the combination to the general mixture. Don't set the pan back on the stove after adding the eggs.

Menus for Lent

ARE you one of the many housekeepers who have always longed to own a steak or fish plank, but hesitated to attempt that usually long and tedious seasoning process?

The new fireproof glass platters can be used in place of the traditional plank and somehow food tastes infinitely better and looks more attractive when the platter can be transferred right from the oven to the dinner table.

The only precaution necessary is to heat the platter in hot water before putting it into the hot oven.

For a Lenten dinner, planked haddock, dressed lettuce, hot biscuits, and fruit compote makes a nice combination.

To prepare the haddock, dip it first in extremely salt evaporated milk diluted one-half with water. Lay the fish, skin down upon the greased platter, cut across it with a very sharp knife into individual portions so as to make serving easy.

Put in a very hot oven for ten or fifteen minutes, then remove and quickly pour over the fish three tablespoons of butter melted and mixed with two tablespoons of lemon juice, salt, pepper and paprika to taste.

With your spoon make a border around the fish of creamy, hot, mashed potato and put back in the oven to brown. Have ready in a small saucepan diced carrots (you can purchase them all diced in convenient containers now, you know) mixed with hot peas to further decorate the dish.

Pour another butter and seasoned lemon juice mixture over the fish, garnish with parsley and lemon slices and rush to the table.

While the fish was browning the biscuits could be mixed and cut and ready to pop into the hot oven when the platter is removed. By the time the fish is served, the tiny biscuits will be nicely baked.

Lettuce, of course, should be thoroughly chilled and served on a cold plate with your favorite dressing. A simple dessert is made by cutting up oranges and bananas together and letting them stand in sugar to taste.

A tablespoon of grated cocoanut in each serving makes a nice addition.

Showing a Seasonable Spirit—Chiffon scarfs—whether they be huge squares or long flowing streamers—are colorfully painted in red Autumnal foliage and in yellow chrysanthemums. Branches and leaves combine to make effective all-over designs.

FOR QUALITY
WHITE HOUSE COFFEE
The Flavor is Roasted In!

Cheese Roast Seasonable

IF your food budget has been straining at its bonds lately, the Lenten season will offer you an excellent opportunity to retrench with meat substitutes and at the same time treat the family dinner table to a new dish or two.

This cheese roast, for instance, is both tasty and cheap.

Cheese Roast—Get a good American or snappy cheese and rub one-half pound through a grater. Drain the liquid from a can of kidney beans, and put the beans and the cheese through the food chopper. Cook a chopped onion or two in a tablespoon of butter, adding just enough water to prevent burning. Combine this with the bean and cheese mixture, and when it is all thoroughly mixed, shape into a loaf or a roll, moisten with butter and water and roll in a cup of bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned, basting occasionally with butter and water or good drippings.

Tomato Sauce—Heat two tablespoons of butter, remove from the fire and stir in two tablespoons of flour. Add one-half cup of water, one-quarter teaspoon of onion juice, one cup strained cooked tomato, one teaspoon salt and a few grains of pepper. Cook for five minutes, stirring regularly.

A Feeling For Felt—prevails so strongly in millinery modes that now a felt handbag, to match the hat, is fast becoming one of the smartest accessories of the sports costume. In all the newest millinery shades, these purses are made in any variety of sizes and shapes.

Pineapple Is Proved Soothing for Sore Throat

In the Spring days, when warmth alternates so often with biting, bitter winds, colds quite too often become the fashion. Extra sleep and light diet will often break up a cold before it has become deep-seated.

At such times pineapple is most desirable in the diet, as its fibrous tissue is laxative and its juice is soothing and healing to the throat.

Pork Chops Casserole Make a Good Dish

For pork chops en casserole, order kidney chops about one-inch thick from fresh Eastern pork loins. Place in casserole and season with salt and pepper. Cover with dry bread crumbs and add 1⅛ cups boiling water. Cover and bake in moderate oven 1½ hours.

Then add more bread crumbs, seasoning with a tablespoon of butter. Bake uncovered till bread crumbs are well-browned.

Mary Elizabeth loves the "Bread that rivals Mother's"

Her mother, Mrs. Robert T. Gidley of Melrose, writes: "We don't have to coax our child to eat Bond Bread—which rivals mother's in flavor and goodness. She loves it! Best of all it's good for her and it's safe to let her have all she wants."

[illegible] Boston housewives [illegible] of their home-baked bread [illegible] the kind of bread they wanted [illegible] their children. Being [illegible] from the best of [illegible] loaves, Bond Bread [illegible] most popular [illegible]

[illegible] that after 8 years of [illegible] Bond Bread [illegible] even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Never

need your hands say

"Dishpan"

"WHY try to keep our hands white and soft," women said, "and then for an hour and a half each day expose them to irritating soaps in the dishpan?"

It was in this way women began using Lux for dishes!

Wash your dishes in Lux and your hands stay smooth and white—blessedly rid of that tell-tale "dishpan" look.

The free alkali in so many soaps—regardless of whether they are flakes, chips or cakes—dries up the beautifying oils Nature placed under the outer skin to keep your hands from getting rough and red. There is no free alkali in tissue-thin, transparent Lux diamonds! Lever Bros. FRIEND SOUGHT AFTER PROBE AT HOSPITAL

Worcester, March 21.—Worcester police are confident that today they will make their arrest of at least one man [illegible] with the murder of George N. Flagg, the weaver-gambler, whose battered body was found in Holden Park last week.

Flagg, father of six children, and [illegible] at Holden was a weaver [illegible] last November when he discovered that he had an uncanny [illegible] at poker. Since that time [illegible] and the police [illegible] that he was killed as the result of a gambling argument, his murderers also intending to rob him.

But 63 cents were found in his pockets though it is known that he had had $600 on his person earlier in the evening.

The police seek a friend of Flagg's whom they believe can give them information which will lead to an arrest. This man, the police think, will be able to tell them of Flagg's movements the night of the murder, and can reveal the name of a woman with whom the Holden man, admitted a gambler by his family, is thought to have had a "date."

Some of the evidence regarding this friend of Flagg's is believed to have been obtained by the police at the United States Veterans Hospital, in Rutland, where employes with whom Flagg had worked until November have been questioned at length at two different times since Thursday.

A [illegible] is being kept at [illegible] house of the [illegible] [illegible] according to [illegible] police have revealed [illegible] Flagg and the woman [illegible] seen Tuesday night. It is thought to be in the south side of Worcester.

That celebrated steed, which has been the target for cheers from the kid movie fans for a long time must have been the animal which staged a glorious race against a trolley car on Elm street, Everett.

The horse suddenly appeared on the track, minus harness of any kind and proceeded to set the pace for the trolley. For a while it led the car, the passengers all craning their necks from windows to see the race while Motorman Michael [illegible] vainly tried to frighten the animal from the tracks by clanging his gong.

Finally at High street the horse gave a triumphant flirt of his tail and started up High street on high.

SLAIN YOUTH'S PARENTS FOUND DEAD IN PACT

Chicago, March 21 (A.P.).—Mystery surrounding the finding of the body of a boy on an improvised funeral pyre near the Des Plaines river in Forest Park was believed today to have been cleared up.

Solution of the case followed discovery of the boy's mother and step-father dead, apparently in a suicide pact, in their Chicago apartment.

Police and relatives found the bodies of Arthur (Jack) Macewen, [illegible] and his wife, Mrs. Helen Mackenzie Macewen, [illegible] when they forced entrance to their flat.

This led to the identification of the boy whose body had been lying since Saturday night unclaimed in an undertaking establishment as Robert Mackenzie, 11, son of Mrs. Macewen by a former marriage. The boy's skull had been crushed.

The two tragedies were connected when police learned of a letter [illegible] Macewen had written to his [illegible], Miss [illegible] Macewen, [illegible] "little Bob" had been "sent away" because he had stolen $20 from his mother's pocketbook.

It added: "Helen told me she was tired of living and some of these days she would end it all for herself and Bob and me."

The missive closed with a request that if he and his wife were found dead the bodies be cremated and asked the sister to call Sunday.

A coroner's physician said death of the man and woman had occurred thirty-six hours previously, presumably from a swift poison, taken with suicide intent.

Absence of the little boy, Robert, about the premises caused Miss Macewen to connect the suicide with the mysterious saying of a lad in Forest Park. Later at an undertaking establishment his identity was established.

HALTS SUSPENSION OF EGG HURLING PUPILS

Six pupils of Chelsea High School who took part in the "egging" of Chelsea City Hall last week may breathe freely today for despite any action of the school board, Mayor John J. Whalen will not permit the six culprits to be suspended for the rest of the year.

The school was agog with the report that the six would be suspended, but the mayor says "No."

"The six boys were honest," said the mayor. "They admitted what they had done. They worked hard rubbing the stains off the building and were humiliated by having thousands watch them at work. I believe that they have suffered enough."

WOMAN BADLY BEATEN AND ROBBED BY THUG

Everett, East Boston and Chelsea police are today seeking a gallant young man who offered to walk with Mrs. Annie Casey from East Boston to her home on Clay street, Everett, but who dropped the gallant pose when they had reached a lonely place, cruelly beat the woman and took $60 from her.

She is in Chelsea Memorial Hospital today, and her condition is so critical that the charge against the sought man may become a more sinister one.

MACKINAC DISASTER THIRD TRIAL STARTED

Providence, R. I., March 21 (A.P.).—For the third time the three men accused in connection with the steamer Mackinac disaster went on trial in Superior court today. Fifty-three lives were lost as a result of an explosion on the vessel August [illegible] near Newport.

The defendants are Captain George W. McVey and Chief Engineer John J. Grant, charged with manslaughter, and Manager George J. Kelley of the Blackstone Valley Transportation Company, charged with being an accessory before the fact.

STARVING SELF TO CHEAT NOOSE

Joliet, Ill., March 21 (I.N.S.).—Charles Duschowski, one of six State penitentiary convicts sentenced to the gallows for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter N. Klein, was standing pat today on his newly inaugurated hunger strike.

Strangely enough, Duschowski's strike is aimed not at the gallows but at the new regime in the Will County jail.

He [illegible] the "hard-boiled" tactics of Police Sergeant William McCann, who was appointed jail "czar" after three of Duschowski's companions [illegible] and sawed their way to freedom. One of the desperadoes, Bernarde Roa, is still at large.

The six condemned men had been in two cells [illegible]. Several days after three of the men and Mexicans had gained their freedom, saws and guns were found in the cell occupied by Duschowski and his two companions.

As soon as Sergeant McCanna took charge he isolated the slayers, putting one each in a cell. At night they were padlocked to their bunks. They were not allowed to mix with other prisoners and not allowed to have visitors. Duschowski resented this treatment.

CO-ED BANK ROBBER ON TRIAL FOR ARSON

Georgetown, Tex., March 21 (A.P.).—Rebecca Bradley Rogers, former University of Texas co-ed, who is under bond pending trial on a charge of robbing the Buda, Tex., bank, is to go on trial here today on a charge of arson in connection with the burning of a vacant residence in Round Rock, Texas.

Recently she won a continuance on the bank robbery charge because of the critical illness of her husband, Otis Rogers, who left his sick bed to defend her. Because Rogers is reported to be in a serious condition at an Austin hospital with tuberculosis and bronchial trouble she will ask for a continuance.

FLAT TIRE RUINS PLANS OF 4 HUB MOVIE 'SHEIKS'

A flat tire on a "drive-yourself" automobile upset the plans of four Jamaica Plain youths to become moving picture stars.

Instead of being acclaimed sheiks of the silver screen the four are under arrest and will go before the Juvenile Court on the charge of the theft of the automobile in which they were taken at Stamford, Ct.

The quartet, Joseph O'Donnell, Stanley [illegible], George Thompson and James Murray, the oldest, seventeen, paid a chauffeur to hire a "drive yourself" car for them last Friday. In this machine they set out for Hollywood.

Near Stamford a tire of the machine went flat. The embryonic screen stars were too excited over their plans to bother with the tire but a Stamford policeman became suspicious and stopped the youths. After some cross-examination they were [illegible] and the Boston police were notified. Special officers [illegible] and Crawley of the Roxbury crossing Station brought the four back to Boston.

Murray is the only one of the four that has been able to secure bail.

The HOLLYWOOD GIRL by BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "The LOVE WRECKER"

Adventures of a Girl From New England in the Movie Colony

"If I were the marrying kind, you're the kind of a girl I'd marry," MacCloud told Bobbie.

CHAPTER XXIV.

If Bobbie had said "yes" without any coaxing, the chances are that Gus MacCloud wouldn't have been half so eager to see her that night.

He was like that. The more of a chase a woman gave him, the more he wanted her. Nine men out of ten are just that way.

So when she shook her lovely blonde head at him and [illegible] sorrowful voice [illegible] have moved heaven and earth to spend that evening with her.

Not only that, but he began to feel that evening was [illegible] in the dim distance. He wanted to see her before then.

"Look here," he said, "your friend, Monica, and I are going to have lunch together. I've asked her to—and I've got to go [illegible] now. But—" He [illegible] his watch and looked at it, frowning.

"I can meet you at 3 o'clock at the corner of your street and Hollywood boulevard. We'll drive out and see the ocean—sunset this time, instead of moonrise. How about it?"

Bobbie went on shaking her head, but even while she was doing it she was sure that she was going to go, as he wanted her to.

"Don't be goofy," MacCloud told her. He laughed, but it was an annoyed, impatient laugh. He was used to watching women jump when he [illegible] the [illegible].

"All right," Bobbie yielded suddenly. "I'll meet you. I shouldn't, but I will."

She went away, walking on air.

There is nothing that can make a woman spend money on herself the way a love affair can.

At no other time in her life does she so need [illegible] her good points and to hide her poor ones—perfumes to make her hair and skin fragrant as Springtime, beads and tiny, dainty handkerchiefs, sheer silken stockings, hats to add mystery and lure to her eyes.

And so at two o'clock Bobbie found herself standing in the most expensive shop on the boulevard.

Like all expensive shops, it was very beautiful and quiet, and the saleswomen were very beautifully groomed and very elegantly dressed in black.

One of them separated herself from a chatting group and came across the soft lavender carpet to Bobbie.

"May I help you?" she asked, and her eyes went up and down Bobbie as if she saw a dozen places where her clothes could be improved.

Bobbie looked around helplessly. She didn't know just what she did want. An artificial flower, perhaps, to pin upon her old sweater. A string of [illegible] beads. Something to freshen her up and make her smart.

"I can't spend much money," she was thinking. She didn't have a great deal left of the Widow Parkin's five hundred.

Finally she decided upon a yellow silk rose and a new string of cloudy amber beads.

It was half past two when she carried them home. Monica was in her room, cuddled up on the window sill in one of her new negligees, polishing her nails.

"Hello," she said without looking up when Bobbie came in.

She sounded cross and Bobbie was sure she was angry because Gus MacCloud had brought her straight home after lunch. At any rate, she was not the care-free, jubilant Monica who had fibbed about going out with someone named "Ted Piper" a few nights before.

"Where are you going?" she asked a few minutes afterward when Bobbie began to change her stockings and slippers.

Bobbie giggled. "Out to watch the sun set with Ted Piper," she said shortly, and Monica had the grace to blush for a wonder.

"A registered letter and a package came for you a while ago," Monica informed her sullenly after a long silence. "You'll have to go over to the Vine street postoffice for it. The mail man took it back there when he didn't find you in."

"Thanks."

After that Bobbie went on dressing in silence.

There is nothing that a girl enjoys more than dressing for a meeting with the man she loves. And Bobbie thoroughly enjoyed every one of the thirty minutes it took her to get dressed to meet Gus MacCloud.

She brushed her hair until it clung close to her beautifully-shaped little head in deep waves. She pow-

FLOWERS DROPPED BY AIRMAN

Flier Strews Blossoms Over Grave of Goodwin Boy, Victim of Auto Tragedy

An airplane flew low over the Everett cemetery today and scattered flowers on the open grave of Frank A. Goodwin, 2nd, only grandson of Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, who was run down and killed by a truck near his home in East Boston, Saturday.

The airplane was piloted by Thomas Groce, an aviator who is a close friend of the registrar. Private funeral services were held for the little victim at the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Goodwin, at No. 8 Thurston street, East Boston. The prayers were offered by Rev. Francis Cronin, rector of St. Joseph's Church, East Boston.

While the funeral services were in progress John B. Gray, nineteen-year-old truck driver of Revere street, Winthrop, who ran down and killed the child, was arraigned in East Boston court, charged with manslaughter and with driving a vehicle so as to endanger the public.

The hearing was held before Judge Joseph H. Barnes and the case was continued until March 29. Gray furnished bail for his appearance at that time.

The Boston Automobile Club was one of the numerous organizations that today expressed sorrow over the bereavement suffered by the registrar.

"It is indeed a pity, after the efforts he has made to reduce accidents, that one of his nearest and dearest relatives should lose his life in one of the common types of automobile accidents," said the motor club statement.

"We of the automobile club hope that the prominence given this tragedy will emphasize upon the community the necessity of greater care on the highways."

The office of the registrar at Commonwealth Pier was flooded today with messages of sympathy and condolence from individuals and organizations throughout New England.

CHOKED TO DEATH BY PIECE OF STEAK

Springfield, March 21 (A.P.)—Bronslow Gondek, 46, fell dead across the table in his home in Ludlow while eating with his family. Examination showed he had been choked by a piece of steak that had lodged in his throat.

THE BIDDING

South Bids	West Bids	North Bids	East Bids
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Final Bid 1 NT. Played by South

SALIENT POINTS OF BIDDING

South holds a very strong hand with stoppers in all four suits. West's top strength is [illegible] below that required for an informatory double of an adverse No Trump, particularly as he holds [illegible] cards of the Spade suit. North can have no reason, distribution or otherwise, to disturb South's No Trump bid.

SALIENT POINTS OF PLAY

Trick 1. On the opening lead of the three of Hearts South can count West with exactly four cards of the suit, because the 4, 3 and [illegible] are in sight, so the game can be won if two tricks are given up in each of the Major suits. [illegible] the [illegible] could be established by overtaking the Jack and Dummy; a successful finesse in Clubs would still have to be won to make game.

Trick 2. The King of Spades is led instead of the Jack to take advantage of the possibility that the Queen may be single. If the Ace is alone, nothing can be gained leading the Jack, as two Spades must still be lost. By leading high Spades, the 8 is made an entry in Dummy for the Diamond and the Club finesse is avoided.

BRAVES SEEK BOX STRENGTH

Hot on Trail of Luque of Reds and Rhem of Cards; Meet A's Today

By NICK FLATLEY

Ft. Myers, Fla., March 21.—The Braves have trickled down into the deepest recesses of the training belt to stage a couple of games with Connie Mack's Athletics.

The tribe plays the A's this afternoon and tomorrow, and then return to St. Petersburg to conclude the work of preparation.

Nick Flatley

Three more games are billed [illegible] St. Pete [illegible] with the [illegible], Wednesday and Thursday, and one with the Browns Friday. Then the athletes [illegible] about until Monday [illegible] when they trek toward the North. The baseball season [illegible] around the corner.

A treaty of peace has [illegible] signed [illegible] Mack and [illegible] Umpire Frank [illegible]. There [illegible] be no rows [illegible] series unless some new and unexpected [illegible] Connie is a [illegible] and [illegible] always [illegible] for [illegible].

BRAVES GOING ON HIGH.

The Braves have been stepping [illegible] with [illegible] edge in these last five games [illegible] head them for home with the winning advantage in the Florida circuit. Manager [illegible] to win [illegible] he has [illegible] better [illegible] figures well for the club.

The tribe is hot on the trail of another pitcher. Offers have been made to the Cincinnati Reds for Adolfo Luque, the famous Cuban and to the St. Louis Cardinals for Flint Rhem, the remaining holdout of the champions.

[illegible] would be a great help to [illegible] experienced pitcher of class who could be depended on to take a regular turn [illegible] box. Manager Dave [illegible] might [illegible] the block.

Luque [illegible] trouble in Cincinnati and [illegible] to get away from there. [illegible] waivers to see [illegible] but Hendricks will hardly strengthen a team that may beat him out of the pennant.

The Braves have a lot of young pitchers, and Cincinnati will want [illegible] to replace the veteran in case he has to go.

RHEM ON MARKET.

Owner Breadon has announced that he would not listen to Rhem's demands and that he was ready to sell the pitcher. Flint led the National League for the greater part of last season and is a real classy pitcher. The [illegible] could stand strengthening [illegible] and they may do business with the Braves.

Judge Fuchs remained back in St. Pete to see what he might do while his team was playing here. Manager Bancroft and Coach Dick Rudolph are both inclined to think this will be a Brave year. But they would like to strengthen a bit, just the same.

"We haven't hurried our pitchers this Spring," Dick explains. "They've worked in turn, and the whole lot of them are ready to step now. They shouldn't fold up when they get back to the North. They [illegible] enough work to [illegible] tough, but not one of them has been allowed to grow the least bit fine.

"They shouldn't mind the cold much. All we want is a break in the weather. If we [illegible] draw a warm Spring [illegible] would have to go. It was [illegible] the club last season, and [illegible] games at Braves Field [illegible] baseball weather [illegible].

"Give us one more real pitcher, and any club will be lucky that gets better than an even break in a series."

BRUINS CLOSE LEAGUE SEASON THIS WEEK

By TED LYNCH.

Boston's hockey championship contender, the Bruins, choose their league schedule with three games this week, two of them on home ice.

Tomorrow evening they meet the Les Canadiens at the Arena, Thursday they travel to Pittsburgh to meet the Pirates and return to the home on Saturday to play their final game against the league leading New York Rangers.

When the Rossmen pulled into town today they had Billy Boucher among their number. Billy has recovered from his shoulder injury and has been practicing with the Montreal teams for the past week.

The largest house of the season will be on hand tomorrow night when the natives clash with the colorful and powerful Canadiens. Owner Adams announced today that there still are a few available ducats but he predicted a sell-out by tomorrow morning.

With comparatively nothing at stake, the demand of Boston fans for tickets for the game tomorrow night is proof that Les Canadiens are the greatest box-office attraction in the game.

The local hockey bugs want to see the team which has scored 18 victories in the last 21 matches. They want to renew acquaintance with the "Flying Frenchmen," Morenz and Joliat. They want to get a glimpse of the promising star in pro hockey, Herb Gardiner, in action on the defence.

Throughout Canada the fans have made Les Canadiens the favorites to win the Stanley Cup. They can see no other team, not even Ottawa.

Fitchburg Not Invited to Play

Fitchburg, March 21.—No invitation has been received by Fitchburg High to defend its national scholastic basketball title at the University of Chicago tournament next week.

As soon as it was learned that Medford High had declined an invitation to compete in Chicago, rumors started flying around to the effect that Fitchburg High had been invited to defend the crown won last year. However, both Physical Director Clarence Amiott and Headmaster Charles T. Woodbury declare that no invitation has been received at the school.

"No word has been received from the Chicago authorities," stated Amiott.

"I have received no invitation from Chicago for the basketball team to compete in the tournament there," Headmaster Woodbury declared.

Neither the headmaster nor the physical director would state what action they would take if an invitation was received from the Chicago authorities.

How Carrigan Makes His Teams Winners

By Jack Conway

"BILL CARRIGAN is still outsmarting the other fellow," remarked Mr. Boston today. "I have been reading the press despatches from New Orleans and notice that 'Old Rough' is driving his gang through to victories in the close games. It is a question of where Bill's brains and fighting spirit are giving the Sox the margin in the nerve racking tussles.

"I have known Bill since back in the days when he was a catcher at Holy Cross and feel confident he will give Boston a much better ball club in the American League than the one we had last year.

Mr. Boston

"Funny thing about Bill. The public has been sold on the idea that Carrigan is a rough, tough fellow ready to clip an umpire on the chin at a moment's notice. They believe his players give him their best efforts because they fear him and that rival athletes shudder at the mention of the name of 'Old Rough.'

"I used to think Bill was a pretty tough guy as I watched him get in the way of Ty Cobb's flying spikes so as to block off a run.

"I shall always remember the day at Fenway Park when Bill got Cobb snared up between third base and him. Carrigan finally ran Ty down and in tagging him out almost punctured a couple of the Georgian's ribs.

"That's the Carrigan of the ball field, fighting every inch of the way to win. He innoculates his players with his own spirit and that is why they grab the close games.

"For the past few years the Sox have usually been losing the close games. They lacked the old sock to send over the few runs necessary to win. With Carrigan in the driver's seat directing the plays in the crucial moment, you will find the Red Sox machine crashing through.

"I'LL tell you why Carrigan's players fight for him, why they are willing to risk spike wounds, broken legs and arms and what not to get runs across the platter and to halt the advance of the enemy. It is because they love 'Old Rough.'

"I traveled with the Sox back in 1914, 1915 and 1916 when Carrigan was at the peak of his career. Those were the days of Speaker, Lewis, Hooper—you don't get outfields like that one nowadays—Engle, Yerkes, Scott, Wagner, Gardner, Janvrin, Cady, Nunamaker, Wood, Ruth, Leonard, Shore, Foster, Collins and Bedient.

"There were some mighty ball players in that lot. They fought for Carrigan because they loved him, not because they were afraid of his whip.

"I REMEMBER one night down in Nashville when Ruth, then a young pitcher, had lost a tough game. I met 'Old Rough' in the lobby of the hotel.

"'Coming to dinner,' I asked.

"'Sorry, but I can't go in with the gang tonight,' he replied. 'I'm eating with the Babe. The big boy lost a tough game today and feels a little bit disheartened. I'm going to have dinner with him and tell him what a great ball player he is. That will cheer him up.'

"Ask Ruth today who is the greatest baseball manager in the world and he will answer without hesitation 'Bill Carrigan.'

"I REMEMBER another occasion when Everett Scott was breaking into Big Time company that the Bluffton idol made a couple of bad boots that cost a ball game. This all happened in a crucial series, too. That night I noticed 'Old Rough' going to dinner with Scottie and when that was over they attended a show. The next day Scottie won the game by a timely double, while he fielded his position in brilliant fashion.

"I understand the Carrigan system has not changed with the years. So keep your eye on the Sox during the coming season. Of course, don't forget that 'Old Rough' has no Speakers, Hoopers, Lewises or Ruths on the job and must be given an opportunity to do a little building. But the old spirit is still very much on the job and that will go a long ways."

11 AMERICANS IN THE GRAND NATIONAL

By ROBERT J. PREW
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
(Special Cable Dispatch)

[illegible] March 21.—The Brit[illegible] are in the grip of the annual [illegible] fever, for during the coming week, the flat racing season opens and the jumping season winds up with the world's great[illegible] the Grand National run at Aintree, Liverpool, over a four and one-half mile course.

Never before in history has this classic steeplechase attracted so [illegible] American entries. As [illegible] stands tonight, eleven horses in [illegible] Amer[illegible] thousands [illegible] dollars are awaiting investment at the bookmakers at the best prices.

American hopes, however, are [illegible] by the fact that last year's winner, Jack Horner, was scratched by his owner, Charles Schwartz of Chicago.

Jack Horner went lame a few weeks ago and has not yet recovered.

English racegoers are interested [illegible] chances of Harold Fowler, [illegible] in the American Embassy here and later an officer in the A. E. F., big game hunter and explorer. Fowler will ride his own mount, Pop Ahead, and has entered another candidate in Golden Peace.

Other American contenders are A. [illegible] will ride his Paulinus; I. A. Balding, riding his Drinmond. Gordon Selfridge, represented by Misconduct; W. D. Blair, by Master of Arts; W. P. Draper, by Knight of the Wilderness; Colonel F. M. Alger by Ballinode and Laddie Sanford, Boy and Marsin.

"Sunday Sport Fight Still On"—Logan

"The fight of the people of this State for more liberal Sunday laws is on," declares General Edward L. Logan, sponsor of the Sunday [illegible] offered in the House.

"The laws controlling the observance of our Sundays are, many of them, still but relics of our Colonial and pre-Revolutionary narrowness. The cry of a so-called "commercialized Sabbath" will not deceive.

"But I am very much gratified at the increased support which was given the proposition of Sunday sports by the Legislature this year. A favorable committee report and the support of ninety-eight Representatives, almost twice the vote of 1926, clearly indicates the growing [illegible] of Sunday sports."

GENE TUNNEY

World's Heavyweight Champion

Gene Tells How Terrific Punches, Instead of Stopping Him, Gave Him New Courage in Carpentier and Dempsey Bouts

A TERRIFIC punch usually has a devastating effect upon the target that it hits. Yet, twice in my career, powerful blows, instead of hurting me and destroying my morale, really gave me a newer faith in myself that made it possible for me to go on to triumph.

In 1924 when I was matched to meet Georges Carpentier, I realized it as the pivotal battle of my career. I figured that if I could get past him—if I could win decisively from the Frenchman—that I was definitely established as a factor in the heavyweight ranks.

My fear was of the far famed right hand of Carpentier. I remembered that he had knocked Jack Dempsey staggering with it, recalled that he had annihilated Joe Beckett, Ted Lewis and a score of others with it; that it was a punch reputed to have so much power that he needed to connect but once to knock his foeman unconscious.

I went into the ring that night determined, beyond all else, to keep away from that right hand. Through the first three rounds, the fear of that blow made [illegible] to a point where I [illegible] most of the aggressive work.

A half dozen times Carpentier let loose with that mighty right hand but each time, in the first three rounds, I ducked under its sweep and it went harmlessly around my neck or over my head.

GEORGES CROSSES UP GENE.

Georges noticed my defense for his right hand and smart battler that he is he set about to "cross" me. I think it happened in the fourth. He swung once, in the usual way—and I ducked the blow as I had been doing. The next time I saw him let fly with it, I did the same thing—I ducked.

But the tricky Frenchman was anticipating just that. And instead of throwing a half-overhand right, as he had been doing, he switched to a hooking uppercut. The punch, carrying the full force of Carpentier's body behind it, hit me solidly on the chin.

It rattled my teeth, it bounced my head back—but that was all. I had taken the mightiest blow of my enemy, and nothing had happened to me except that I muttered to myself—

"He can't hurt me."

The punch that I had feared had struck me on a vital spot—and my chin demonstrated that it could assimilate it. Naturally, the result upon me was a total loss of that fear, a new-found confidence in myself and a feeling of certainty as to the outcome.

I tossed caution aside in the next round—for caution no longer was necessary. I tore into Carpentier, absolutely oblivious to the fact that he had a right hand. For that right hand no longer was a menace. I took the offensive in that fight and in the fifth round the volley of punches I drove into Georges, dropped him to the canvas and from then on, victory for me was only a matter of time.

FEARED "RABBIT PUNCH."

The thing I feared about Jack Dempsey was his rabbit punch. Of course, I knew Dempsey wouldn't deliberately use it. And I kept on wondering and wondering what would happen when he landed that hammer blow of his on the base of my brain. I knew he had used it in his former fights, and might let it fly in a mixup with me.

Night after night I thought about it. I knew I could defend myself against any other of his blows but that; there was no real defence against the rabbit [illegible].

But I felt that unconsciously Dempsey would use the "rabbit punch." And he did.

When the bell sent us into action, and I jumped from my corner, I kept saying to myself: "Look out for the 'rabbit punch.'" And when he went into the first clinch I pinned Dempsey's arms in such a way that he couldn't use it. But eventually another clinch came. We went into it fast—with Dempsey's arms on my shoulders around my neck.

I knew what was coming—prepared myself for it. And it came. Dempsey lifted one arm off my shoulder and brought a sledge hammer stroke down on my neck.

We broke from that clinch, went into another, he hit me on back of the neck again, and even as the punch landed, I found myself mumbling—

"You can't lose, now, Gene."

For twice, within a few seconds I had taken Dempsey's most feared punch; twice he had hit me the blows that I felt might stun or stagger me.

SURVIVES CRUSHING BLOWS.

And neither had the slightest effect upon me. With the only fear gone that I had of Dempsey's punches, I just went into him after that, full of confidence and faith in myself and methodically cut him down and made him an ex-champion of the world.

In the Carpentier fight it was something like four rounds before I lost the fear of his right hand punch, because it took him about that long to land it.

With Dempsey it was different. I had to wait less than a minute in the fear of a certain punch, for Jack let it go at the first opportunity.

If he hadn't used it in the first round, nor in the second or third, I guess that the outcome of those early rounds would have been different. For, fearing that Dempsey punch in a clinch, I would have avoided clinches as much as was humanly possible.

And that would have given Jack the chance to do plenty of open fighting at a time when I was still a bit fearful of a blow that he had not delivered.

But Jack planted a couple of those punches on my neck at the first opportunity—and the fact that they didn't drop me, nor even make me dizzy, made me lose all fear of the Dempsey blow that I feared most of all, gave me all the confidence that I needed and I whipped him without ever taking a backward step—except when strategy demanded.

REGULAR JOBS ON RED SOX STILL OPEN

By BILL GRIMES

New Orleans, La., March 21—After three weeks of extensive Spring training, the open season is still on regarding the ownership of [illegible] on the Red Sox.

[illegible] three [illegible] Manager Bill Carrigan has been looking over his charges every day at Heinemann Park, but with the possible exception of Phil Todt and Ira Flagstead none of the players [illegible] themselves to the new mentor to the extent of being allotted a permanent job.

Bill Grimes

Although Fred Hofmann and Grover Hartley are still leading the field of catchers during the past week, Cliff Knox has replaced Billy Moore as the third choice.

During the past week, Jack Rothrock was moved over to second base after he had been working around the initial sack. He appears far more at home at the keystone sack. Bill Regan has been under the weather all Spring, and Rothrock has a fine chance to get the jump.

As Topper Rigney has been out of the game most of the week, due to injuries, "Pee Wee" Wanninger and Elmer Eggert have been getting a crack at shortstopping.

Wanninger has been in at Rigney's berth on the first team and although he has fielded in wonderful fashion, he has not been hitting. Eggert is coming along faster and faster every day.

Bill Rogell, who is getting his third tryout with the Red Sox, does not seem to be able to stand the gaff. He has been down for a week and it will not be surprising if he is let out.

Fred Haney still has the call for third base, but he is being pushed hard by Red Rollings. Haney has not been extending himself very noticeably but just as soon as Rollings recovers his health he will make the former Detroit third sacker step.

The outfield is pretty well set. Ira Flagstead is a fixture in center field. He is the same old ball hawk, racing all over the outfield and pulling down drives and has recently begun to hit.

Walter Shaner and Bill Jacobson are still fighting off Johnnie Tobin and Cleo Carlyle.

WHITE SOX EXHIBIT AGAINST WICHITA FALLS

Wichita Falls, Tex., March 21 (I.N.S.).—Ray Schalk and his White Sox family were here today for their four-game exhibition series against the local Texas League club. The Sox were unable to play the third game of their series with the Cats at Fort Worth yesterday on account of rain.

The Braves have won seven games and lost five to date in the exhibition series. The boys have played off their last four.

Frank Gibson will be out of the game for two or three days more with a sore finger. He stuck it into a foul tip Saturday. He's the only cripple on the squad.

HOPKINS' PLAN IS FAVORED

Brown and Yale Are Ready to Take Part if Conference Is Called

Brown and Yale will be represented at any conference that may be called to consider the proposed football reforms advocated by President Ernest M Hopkins, president of Dartmouth.

In a statement issued to the Boston Evening American President William Faunce of Brown today declared:

"I do not wish to make any comment on the proposed football reforms until I have the opportunity to make a prolonged and profound study of the matter.

"Should any conference be called to study [illegible] Hopkins' [illegible] changes, Brown will be represented."

At Yale it was the [illegible] opinion that a conference at this time on the proposed reforms might be desirable.

Professor George H. Nettleton, head of the Yale athletic council, paid a fine tribute to Dr. Hopkins as an executive and said that any proposal coming from [illegible] would be [illegible] considered.

Harvard also expressed a willingness to carefully study the proposed changes. An official statement from James W. Seymour, secretary of the Harvard Bureau of [illegible], was as follows:

"Commenting on the suggestion regarding football made by President Hopkins of Dartmouth, as reported in the morning papers, it was remarked at Harvard, 'How interesting it is that college authorities throughout the country are giving serious consideration to unsatisfactory conditions in intercollegiate athletics.'

"All plans proposed, it was said, deserve study, but none can be effective unless some of the colleges co-operate in a common plan. At present each college has its individual problems which it must consider as well as the general problems facing the colleges as a group.

"Mr. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, remarked that when a university makes a careful and unhurried study of such a subject any suggestion made by it deserves thee same careful study by other universities and that hasty comment by them, favorable or unfavorable, of any plan proposed would be unfair and not in the best interests of intercollegiate sport.

Reggie Brown Strong in Condemning Plan

Football Coach Reggie Brown of Boston University, [illegible] Pres. Hopkins of Dartmouth on football, said "Such a system of football is most impracticable. It would spoil the game, as [illegible] is the most complex game there is.

"To let students coach a football team would be comparable to letting an office boy run a business."

No Reform Needed at Boston College

"The football reforms proposed by President Hopkins of Dartmouth College may be necessary for Dartmouth and some of the larger colleges, but I do not believe that they are necessary at Boston College," is the opinion of Rev. [illegible] A. Mattimore, S. J., [illegible] of athletics at Boston [illegible].

[illegible]

"But as far as [illegible] this is not the case at Boston College. Most of our games are home games.

"Regarding the fact that there is much gambling on the outcome of football games, football is no more the direct cause of gambling than is any other athletic contest. Gambling follows football only accidentally."

On the other points of Pres. Hopkins proposals, Fr. Mattimore declined to comment at the present time.

Bingham "Not Qualified" to Talk at Present

"I am not qualified to give out any expert opinion at this time," declared William Bingham, athletic director at Harvard University.

"I have only been at Harvard a year, and will [illegible] to study the proposals of Pres. Hopkins."

"Step in Right Direction," Says George Owen

George Owen, former Harvard football star, favors the changes in football [illegible] by President Hopkins of Dartmouth.

"It is a step [illegible] right [illegible] although it will [illegible] long time to work out," Owen declared. "Professional coaches are sure to fight the move to introduce student coaches as the enthusiastic graduates who always want winning teams.

"I approve the home and home plan and feel that from the [illegible] [illegible] Preside Hopkins' plan is much superior to the present systems.

"The Hopkins plan may not be the best plan, but it is a step in the right direction."

Dean Lord Thinks Changes Would Help

Dean E. W. Lord of the College of Business Administration, in commenting on the proposed changes [illegible] made by President Hopkins of Dartmouth stated.

"We have not gone into football very extensively at Boston University. My personal feeling is that the changes in the present system proposed by President Hopkins might prove beneficial.

"That is my own personal opinion. [illegible] not know whether the student body of the athletic council would agree with me in this."

How Pres. Hopkins Hopes to Help Football

President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College, in an effort to extirpate the current evils from the game of football, has suggested the following radical changes.

2—Professional coaching will be abolished. Seniors, presumably men who have played during their sophomore and junior years, will act as coaches.

3—Every college shall have two teams and reciprocal schedules. That is, one team will play at home and the other away, against the same opponent and on the same day.

President Hopkins believes these changes would benefit football by.

1—Taking emphasis off football and placing it on studies.

4—Ending the wholesale desertion of studies in the Fall while the college "follows the team."

Golfers Out in Force Despite Icy Blasts

By STED CHANDLER

Summertime came to a somewhat abrupt end in mid-afternoon Saturday, and Sunday turned a bit blustery and March-like, especially in contrast to the past fortnight of real golfing weather.

Nevertheless the enthusiasm which had been steadily mounting all during the week was not abashed by a few threatening blasts, and Massachusetts golf courses presented scenes of earnest activity for practically every minute of daylight over the week-end.

Sted Chandler

Saturday afternoon the big parade started, while the sun was still out in full strength. Late in the evening, with the threat of rain in the air and an overcast sky, the writer drove up the South Shore and found the twilight still dotted by golfers—most of them still swinging clubs.

Sunday, colder and windy, the same panorama presented itself. "Squeeze in every possible putt while the weather lasts" is the golfer's way of saying "Make hay while the sun shines." He digs divots from dawn to dusk.

The chief exceptions to the heavy-population list over the past week-end were Albemarle and Manchester-by-the-Sea. President Nichols of Albemarle has requested the members of his club to refrain from play until the course is in perfect condition.

Manchester, the latest of the starters, has yet to get in line, but the work done on the course has progressed so well that it will not be long before play begins there.

Forty or fifty cars were parked at Belmont when we breezed by, and the links were dotted with familiar figures. Commonwealth and The Country Club, Brae Burn and Charles River were likewise occupied.

From the Cape word came up that Francis Ouimet was getting in a few practice rounds at Pocasset, a course which has been well under way for many weeks now and which George Beech reports to be in ideal condition.

Jack Campbell was out at Salem, which, together with the North Shore Club, attracted as large a gathering as any section in the State. The combined totals of these two Salem clubs was well over the five hundred mark, and an estimate placed at seven hundred would probably not be far out.

Arimont reported several score playing. Word from Woodland, Myopia and Norfolk was to the effect that the best turnout of the year was playing on each of these courses.

Local Bike Favorite Leads 6-Day Pack

Chicago, March 21.—Carl Stockholm, paired with Franco Georgetti, Italian cyclist, was leading the iron pack early today in Chicago's 15th international six-day bicycle race. They have covered over 90 miles, with a total of four stolen laps.

Soon after the pack left the corral they jellied together, and lap after lap found the teams in a jam. Stockholm, on a signal from Georgetti, snapped into a fast pedal spin and had the bunch spreading. During one of the jams, Eddie Merkner fell from the top rim to the pit, suffering a bad pedal cut in the ankle.

Judging from the riding, the teams of Stockholm and Georgetti and Winter and Spencer look like the two strongest combinations.

BUCKY HARRIS PADS OUT HURLERS WITH YOUTHS

Washington, March 21 (A.P.)—Manager "Bucky" Harris of the Senators is inclined to pad out his pitching staff with youngsters rather than hold on to the veterans whose dependability has become an uncertain quantity. He has tentatively slated "Curly" Ogden for the minors.

"I am convinced that he will be one of the next to go," Harris said yesterday. "If we were hard up for pitchers, I still might take a chance on him, but we have a number of likely youngsters on hand and several have shown up better than 'Curly.'"

YANK ROOKIES SOON TO FEEL THE AXE

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21 (I.N.S.)—The younger members of the New York Yankees were doing the well-known quaking in boots today, for Manager Huggins' axe has begun to swing. Jim Wiltse, a promising young right-hander, was shipped to the Buffalo club of the International League last night, and indications are that further transferences are in sight.

Spring football practice will start as soon as the boys return from their Easter vacation.

The election of a basketball captain will be held again Wednesday. The Athletic Committee ruled that the last election was illegal.

Midget Packages of TNT to Clash in Tussle at the Arena Tonight

By JACK CONWAY

FIDEL LaBARBA, world's fly weight champion, and the heavy thumping Johnny Vacca of [illegible] propose to furnish another [illegible] battle when they clash in a [illegible] bout at a Suffolk A. A. [illegible] at the New Boston Arena tonight.

Vacca makes no secret of the fact that he will try to knock La Barba out tonight. He says he will [illegible] from the bell in the first round and is confident he will [illegible] a knockout.

Vacca makes no secret of the fact [illegible] he will be able to [illegible].

"There wasn't anything lucky about the way I [illegible] La Barba [illegible]," said Vacca. "If I had [illegible] the champion to the canvas once, there [illegible] have been some [illegible] but I was fortunate in [illegible] his defense and I sent him to the [illegible] four times.

"You will also remember that when I [illegible] him down three times with [illegible] in the second round it was a left hook to the [illegible] that dropped him in the fourth session. You can bet everything you have that I shall not only knock La Barba down tonight, but I shall clout him with sufficient force to keep him down."

LABARBA isn't the least bit upset by Vacca's confidence.

"I was tipped over four times in our last meeting with Vacca, but [illegible] during the latter part [illegible]," said the champion. "My [illegible] wasn't the first case of where a title holder has run into a [illegible] and got into difficulties. In most of these cases the champion has usually reversed the result in a return [illegible]. I don't think anybody will question my superiority over Vacca after tonight's mill."

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin says interest in tonight's quarrel indicates one of the largest crowds that has jammed the Arena this year.

LABARBA and Vacca will be supported by an attractive preliminary card. Frankie Hebert of Lowell and Harry Goldstein of the West End will collide in the semi-final of eight sessions. It is likely that the victor of this skirmish will be pitted against the winner of the LaBarba-Vacca affair.

Bob Jasse of Revere, one of the most promising of New England's middleweights, will toss punches at Frank Senk of Springfield in another eight-round affair. This tussle should produce plenty of action.

Marty Donahue of Worcester and Gene Mara of Milford will shoot away from the post in a third eight round conflict.

Joe Connolly of Dorchester and Johnny Barrett of Cambridge are down to strut their stuff in a six rounder.

The show will be opened by a six round tussle, in which Jack Morosso of Cambridge will be pitted against Corporal Dan Lucia. Morosso says he won't make it necessary for the fans to watch six rounds of battling. He promises to let the big sock breeze over in the early sessions.

UNIVERSITY CLUB GOLF GET-TOGETHER MARCH 25

The first golfing get-together of the University Club will be held March 25, and the first tournament will take place at the Winchester Country Club on the second of May.

Bowen Tufts is chairman of the golf committee, upon which E. S. Childs, G. H. Pushee, S. H. Green, B. K. Stephenson, O. B. Denison, F. L. O'Connor, R. O. Ainslee, G. F. Parsons and Henry Foote also serve.

CLYDE HULL OUT TO GET TUSSLE WITH MELLO

Clyde Hull, cowboy welterweight from Texas and conqueror of Pete Latzo, is the latest challenger of Al Mello of this city, challenger for the championship of the world in that division.

Hull, until a few short weeks ago was an unknown figure in the boxing game in this part of the country. Then he met Latzo, champion of the world, in a 10-round bout in [illegible] Texas. The result of the [illegible] ring history, for in that bout the Texan proved that he is one of the hardest if not the hardest hitting welterweights in this country. [illegible] known Mr. Hull floored [illegible] but twice. He [illegible] eyes and broke [illegible] of the champion of the world. All in all he treated Mr. Latzo quite shamefully and at the [illegible] that he [illegible] as hard if not harder than any of the welterweights who are [illegible] front [illegible] welterweight [illegible].

Moving Pictures and Its Effect Upon Eyes

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association

A[illegible] from motion pictures [illegible] Wyman. They obtained the use of a projection room and an assortment of colored and ordinary films. As experimental subjects they used university students, high school children, and business people of Los Angeles, to the number of about 150.

The test used was the Ives test [illegible] The [illegible] visual keenness of each subject was tested until three successive constant readings were obtained.

When this had been done, the subjects were sent into the projection [illegible] was exhibited [illegible] the subjects read current magazines in a well-lighted office for forty-five minutes.

This was [illegible] maximum time [illegible] could continue without discomfort.

Then they were tested again. The colored picture used was "Wanderer of the Wasteland," taken by the new [illegible] through a red and the other through a green filter. The prints are dyed red and green and then glued together, so that the light projected through them is given its color value on the screen.

[illegible] a reading test [illegible] a black and white picture [illegible] saw both pictures. Group III consisted of 93 who saw the [illegible] picture and 153 who saw the black and white one.

In Group I after reading for forty-five minutes 42.6 per cent showed [illegible] visual acuity, but after viewing a black and white picture only 20.6 per cent. of this group showed a fall. An interesting sidelight on this test is that when a group was sent straight from forty-five minutes of reading to an hour and a half of the picture, 43 per cent. of those who had shown a fall after reading improve after seeing the picture. This was probably because of the [illegible] afforded.

In Group II 58 per cent. showed diminution after the black and white picture and 45 per cent. after the colored picture. The two parts of Group III gave an equal percentage of fa[illegible] that they found the colored picture less tiring.

It is, therefore, evident that it is more tiring to read a [illegible] for three quarters of an hour than to see a movie for an hour and a half, and that technicolor pictures are less tiring than ordinary ones.

Those who suffer eyes [illegible] from motion pictures are those who would suffer fatigue from any other use of their eyes.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

[illegible]

A DAILY READER.

I CANNOT imagine why anybody should take the point of view that it is "not the style" to thank for such a charming and special courtesy as a wedding present. Such a boorish point of view would at once put one out of the realm of good manners. Not to thank for a present of any kind is simply rank discourtesy, discourtesy of the worst form.

[illegible] cation is the highest form of civilization," and so the more appreciative we are and the more we express our appreciation, the finer persons we are. By the same token, we can figure out where we come in the status of civilization when we are not appreciative, and when we do not express our appreciation.

A very definite rule that every well-bred bride to be observes is that she writes a personal note of thanks for every gift received during each day. Then, when she leaves for her wedding trip she leaves with a feeling that every kind friend has been thanked for the gift or his thought [illegible] ness. Of course sometimes she cannot thank for the gifts that arrive at the last minute, but then the friend who has sent such a late gift will also not expect a prompt answer.

The punctilious bride also leaves word for some member of her family to write a note to senders of last minute presents saying that the [illegible]

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

One Side of the Story

The grocer's telephone call nearly ruins the Smith family budget. Mrs. Smith after giving a substantial order, continues:

"Salad dressing? I should say I do—for chicken salad. The whist club is coming here Tuesday."

"A jar of that good olive butter, if it's the same brand as I had before."

"Some of those soda crackers that come in the big red package. They're fine."

"That will be all. Thank you."

"What's that?"

"Oh, yes. I do need soap. And a new wash board; and, my goodness, a bottle of ammonia and blueing. Let's stop before I think of something else."

Whereupon the grocer concludes that the power of suggestion in one call is worth as much as his whole month's telephone bill.

Feel Stiff and Achy?

If You Would Be Fit There Must Be Good Elimination of the Blood Impurities.

TO FEEL constantly lame and achy is often indication of improper elimination. The kidneys are the blood filters.

Sluggish function, however, permits retention of waste poisons and is apt to make one languid, tired and achy, with dull headaches, dizziness and often a nagging backache. A common symptom of imperfect kidney function is scanty or burning excretions.

Assist the kidneys at such times with a stimulant diuretic. Since 1885 Doan's Pills have been winning friends the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Gust Green, 1933 E. Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa, says: "I was miserable with backache and my kidneys weren't acting right, as the excretions were scanty and burned in passing. A friend recommended Doan's Pills and they helped me promptly. I have told hundreds about Doan's."

Mavis made a desperate effort to [illegible] composure, and managed to laugh more or less naturally.

"I amuse myself well enough," she said with a shrug. "I am resting for a time. Later perhaps I go to America, or possibly South Africa."

"And how is your new friend, Mr. Luke Jefferies?"

[illegible] question came [illegible] he had stopped laughing, and his black almond-shaped eyes were fixed unwaveringly upon the girl's face.

Mavis turned crimson and then deathly white.

"Luke Jefferies," she repeated. "Oh, he [illegible] all right."

"Are you sure?"

"Why, yes."

"How long is it since you saw him?"

"I had lunch with him this very day. I left him about two hours ago."

"Gentle," said Vishnil, impassive. "Good, Miss Kane, do not excite yourself. As far as I know your love is safe for the moment. I was merely commenting upon the uncertainty of human life."

There was something about this man that terrified Mavis.

"You Choose Your Friends Unwisely," Vishnil Told Her

He suddenly caught the girl by the shoulders and threw her from him so that she sprawled at his feet.

Mavis was on her knees, her face working with emotion, as she looked up at the man in the chair.

"How can it be done?" she breathed.

"Luke Jefferies has a secret," said Vishnil, "and while he has that secret his life is in constant danger. He has no more hope of escaping the forces against him than a plucked pigeon would have against an eagle. Either he must give us the secret, or we shall kill him."

A great light of comprehension flashed across Mavis's face.

"You want me to get his secret from him," she whispered. "Suppose I succeeded, would you on your solemn honor swear to leave him unharmed?"

Vishnil nodded slowly.

"We should not wish to harm him if we knew his secret," he said. "But I doubt your powers of persuasion. He is obstinate and suspicious. With such a man, force only will prevail. He must be made to recognize his own helplessness. He must be made to see that the power arrayed against him is too strong to be resisted. But, the problem exists how to do this? How to take such a man, without killing him in the attempt."

"I Will Get His Secret From Him," Declared Mavis

Mavis' eyes distended with fear. [illegible] she cried. "It is too [illegible] to think of. I will get his secret from him. I have a lot of [illegible] him. I must succeed [illegible]"

"I cannot betray [illegible]," moaned Mavis. "He would hate me ever afterwards."

"If he is not betrayed, as you call it, he will not live another week," said Vishnil, coolly. "Think over what I have said, and when you have thought it all out, let me know your answer. Nothing will be conveyed to you until I receive your complete willingness to obey me. And remember, to betray me," he grinned for a moment, "would mean your instant destruction."

Vishnil stopped and picked his hat from a chair.

"If you wish to save him," he said, "you will make sure that he is delivered into our hands—without a struggle. That is the only way, and a woman can do it." He turned towards her, and looked at the girl with his dark, sleepy eyes.

"You will do what I wish," he said slowly.

Mavis strove to speak, but could not. She looked at him for a moment in silence, then pitched to the floor in a faint.

Vishnil gazed at her with an impassive face, then he walked from the room. In the hall he met the French maid.

"Look to your mistress," he said as he opened the door of the flat. "She has had a shock, and needs assistance."

Gus laughed, showing his square, white teeth.

"Cat!" he called her. "Slamming your best friend."

"She's not my best friend and I'm not slamming her! I think she's a wonderful looking thing without being the least bit pretty," Bobbie defended herself. "I'm not jealous of her."

"You don't need to be. [illegible] and I are simply old friends. I like to hear her say funny things," MacCloud answered [illegible]. "[illegible] different girls for different things—"

"What do you like me for?" Bobbie hadn't wanted to say that, but it was said before she could stop herself.

Girlish Complexion Now Easily Acquired

If your complexion is bad just try this simple, harmless home treatment. It will prove a revelation to you. This evening before retiring cover the entire face with a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax which you can get at any drug store. In the morning wash this off with warm water. Fine particles of the lifeless scarf skin adhere to the wax and are removed with it. Repeat this treatment nightly until the entire surface skin is absorbed in this way. Result: the loveliest natural complexion imaginable. The fresh, new skin then in evidence is soft and velvety in appearance, delicately tinted with the bloom of youth.

The old surface skin comes off so gradually there is no pain, no inconvenience, and no detention indoors. Freckles, moth patches, pimples or blotches are of course removed with the skin itself. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty.

Being Ended — New way discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

BECAUSE one woman told another, and because doctors and nurses so urged, millions of women are discarding old-time sanitary ways for the new way called Kotex.

✓ First, you discard Kotex as easily as tissue. No laundry, no embarrassment.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads, it enables one to wear sheerest frocks and gowns without slightest fear of embarrassment. Also deodorizes, thus ending all danger of offending.

Eight in every 10 better class women employ it. Once you use it you'll never again dare the uncertainty of old ways.

Obtain at any store simply by saying "KOTEX." Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

BE GRATEFUL THAT YOU ARE BLESSED WITH HEALTH

Your husband or your wife may have developed infirmities which make it impossible for you to go out together.

How do you accept the change in your plans?

Do you show displeasure, annoyance and make little slurring remarks or do you give understanding sympathy?

Some men are sour and grouchy if the baby develops the measles or any one of the contagious diseases which come to a household of children.

Not a word of kindness and encouragement to the mother, who must give up as much in her way as a man must in his.

Perhaps it is a broken arch or a dislocated hip or some trouble which means months of suffering. How do you act toward the sufferer?

Perhaps you are mad about it because your wife's continued disability interferes with your married life routine, or you cannot attend social functions without her, so you vent your feelings in snappy, snarly, sarcastic words.

Consider yourself fortunate that you are the one who is well and able to enjoy life.

DAILY SHORT STORY

DETECTIVE SPORT

By Louise P. Armstrong

SPORT was a dog of little discretion—slow and sleepily-eyed when he should have been alert and eager, lagging behind in the hunt one minute, then dashing off at a mad tangent when he should have had his nose to the ground, scenting game.

"He's certainly not cut out for a bird-dog," commented Tom Winston on the evening he returned from a week-end hunting trip. A pair of big brown eyes gazed at him devotedly even as he spoke, and the stumpy tail beat a happy tattoo on the floor. "Neither is he a watch dog, I'm afraid," Tom continued. "Sport, ole feller, you are a total loss, and I'm not willing to leave you in charge of the house tonight while I go into town."

"And would his master say mean things about him?" cried Dolly Winston, hugging the tousled head affectionately. "But, Tom, you know he's a reliable dog." She looked up eagerly at her young husband. "He's very observant and fearless, and I'd feel perfectly safe with him."

Sport beat another enthusiastic tattoo, then suddenly pricked up his shaggy ears, listened attentively, dashed out of the open door, and was off down the path, yip-yapping as he ran.

"You see!" exclaimed Tom in exasperation. "Now you'd better let me drive you around to your mother's for the night. I've got to have a long talk with my client, go over the details of the case before court opens tomorrow. For I believe that Judge Evans is impatient and wants this case off his hands in a hurry."

"No, Tom," opposed Dolly firmly. "I'll stay here. The dog will be back. He always comes right back. Now go ahead and don't worry."

Reluctantly, Tom Winston got into the car and started up the lane to the highway. He had to smile as he thought of Dolly's championship of their erratic pup, for she had been much opposed to his having a dog at first. "I wish he was more reliable, though," mused Tom.

Twilight shadows were falling as he neared a clump of pine trees at the bottom of a dip in the road. It was a dreary, isolated spot, and his thoughts were forcibly drawn to the present case, in which he had been retained as defendant's counsel. For it was here the crime had been committed. Here beneath the [illegible] bridge the body of old man Simmons had been found, sprawled in distorted shape, his face half under the tepid waters of the little stream which flowed from the marshy lowlands to the West. Two farm hands had found him in the early morning hours as they were going to market with their produce. The Keck brothers, silent, taciturn men, who had been raised in the mountain districts, and who only lately had come into the valley to work.

They had recognised the old man immediately, they said, for they had farmed a part of his place the year before. And they were able to give important information. Harry Simmons, they stated, had felt very bitterly toward his father, had quarreled with him openly on many occasions, and they had only lately heard Mr. Simmons threaten to cut the boy out of his will. The Keck brothers made very good witnesses for the Commonwealth, and Harry Simmons was locked securely in jail, without bail, anxiously awaiting the conclusion of the case—the verdict of the jury.

The place in the half-light of evening looked mysteriously intriguing and Tom Winston stopped his car and sat reflecting upon the spot. He was sorry for Harry Simmons because he believed in the boy's innocence. But Harry's hot, impetuous temper was decidedly against him, the quarrels he had had with his father, that irascible old fellow, as not headed as his son.

Tom believed that they had really been devoted to each other. The tears he had seen in Harry's eyes when he spoke of the old man had seemed to him honest grief, and the lad seemeed more distressed over his father's untimely death than over his own present predicament. Tom did not believe that the accused was posing.

Water gurgled under the bridge, and above the pine trees rustled in the night breeze. But for these sounds all was silent, a tense, breathless sort of quiet. Then on the roadway behind him, Tom Winston heard the yelp of a dog!

It was Sport, he knew that in an instant. Sport sprang around the car, and stood on the edge of the old bridge, barking joyously at the sight of his master. Vigorously he wagged his stumpy tail.

"Go home, sirrah!" Tom cried. "Go home! A nice sort of watch dog you are, deserting your mistress like this!"

Sport's ears dropped and he turned tail, but instead of taking off down the road, he jumped from the bridge into the undergrowth, and though Tom got out of the car and called to him in a conciliatory tone he stubbornly refused to come out. Tom stood on the bridge, feeling both wrathful and uncertain. Should he return home and bring Dolly into town with him? He wanted to give himself plenty of time to discuss all details of the case with Harry Simmons, and with his partner Sam Nettleton, leaving no stone unturned to prepare himself for the morrow when he would try to clear the boy of guilt. Hardly time to go back he reasoned, but he'd have to do it—couldn't very well leave Dolly all alone.

But as he was about to turn back to the car, he observed that Sport had come out of hiding and was digging assiduously in the soft dirt on the sloping bank of the stream. Sport sniffed excitedly as he dug. Tom whistled. The dog paused for an instant, then with a yelp he resumed his labor. Tom saw in amazement that he was tugging at a dark object which had evidently been buried in the soft loam. Now he had it in his mouth, and was trotting up the bank. He laid it at his master's feet as he sprang upon the bridge. Then he looked up eagerly and wagged his stumpy tail.

"Holy smoke!" cried Tom. "Looks like a wallet, a mighty heavy one, too. Let's see!" He opened it and found to his amazement that it was crammed with gold pieces. Old man Simmons' wallet? Could it be? And here in a pocket at the side of the wallet was a stiff paper, damp from the moisture of the creek bank, but still fairly well preserved. Tom gingerly pulled it out and glanced at it. "Old man Simmons' will!" he gasped, half aloud.

Jumping into the car with his precious find, he called to the dog Sport, now docile and friendly, sprang upon the seat beside him, and settled down quietly as his master turned the car around in the direction of—home. No use going into town now. He'd have a look at that will. Something told him his client was safe!

Under the light of the blue lamp on the living room table, Tom again spread out the worn, dirty paper, and read from the queer document the following to Dolly, who sat beside him, her eyes big with excitement.

"In the name of God, Amen. I, Hiram Simmons, hereby declare this my last will and testament. I leave everything I possess, including the gold which is hidden in this house, to my son, Harry. Harry knows where the gold is. It is here because I have no faith in banks.

"There shall be no doubt as to my boy's right to my estate. We have quarreled, but we understand each other. He is a good son. And I do not want any sharp lawyer trying to upset this will. I hereto sign my name on the 15th day of June, 1910.

"Hiram Simmons."

But at the bottom of the paper was a further inscription:

"I am taking the money to town, to put in a bank. It may be safer after all. Anyway, I don't trust those Keck boys. I fired them for good reasons, and they have been hanging about the place. The money and this will I am taking into town in the morning to be locked in the vaults of the bank, so that my son, Harry, may have it safely after I am gone. H. S."

"Well," exclaimed Tom Winston. "I guess that proves Harry's case all righta! The old man was fond of him, in spite of his crochety ways. And he mistrusted the Kecks—said they were hanging about. He was suspicious and took the gold to carry it into town to safety, but they got him on the way, and being afraid after what they had done, they buried the wallet in the sand. Of course they did not know about the will."

"And they've been too closely watched to get it since," cried Dolly.

"Yes," confirmed Tom. "I saw to that. Didn't trust 'em myself—we've won the case all right," he added thoughtfully, "thanks to Sport and his irresponsible ways."

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL colleges now have bureaus where students can arrange their petting parties in advance.

THIS is a great idea and much better than the free-lance system.

IT puts spooning on a business basis.

A MAN can tell today who's going to be sitting on his lap a week from Thursday.

ONE co-ed is so popular that she's dated up for two years after she gets out of college.

SHE'LL have to take a post-graduate course to catch up with her petting.

IT looks as though she'll have to give up her studies and devote her time to necking.

ALREADY she's nineteen hugs and twenty-three kisses behind her roommate.

HER chum is seven laps ahead.

SHE'S broken so many engagements that she's afraid to look a raccoon coat in the face.

SHE had her chin lifted last week and now the boys have to stand on their tip-toes to kiss her.

HER brother was very popular also. He used to take so many girls out riding that he had to sell his roadster and buy a street car.

HE'S been out with every dame in Chicago and now he's working Milwaukee.

AS soon as a man gets married he's automatically taken off the market.

HIS wife usually removes him from circulation.

A WEDDING bell is the bachelor's curfew.

COLLEGE days are the happiest moments of a man's life and the nights are even more so.

EVERY married woman should be able to keep her youth and beauty without the aid of a rowing machine, a masseuse, or an anti-fat diet.

No "Sweet Woman" should need the help of a gymnasium and a physical culture trainer as long as she keeps a vacuum-cleaner and a husband around the house.

Here is the Daily Dozen of one Fond Wife!

I rise promptly at the merry sound of the dumb-waiter whistle and take a light, brisk leaping exercise from the bedroom to the kitchen shaft. This is better than tennis for the biceps.

With a free movement of the arms grab a tea towel, lift the ice off the shelf and heave it into the ice box, thus losing half a pound of superfluous flesh a day, and at least one fingernail a week.

After that I do a graceful pas-seul to the kitchen range and take a few wrist exercises with the coffee percolator.

back to the shower. I make half a dozen vigorous passes with the bath towel, and am out again before my husband has awakened from his beauty sleep.

My breakfast is very light, as I have to serve all the family first, and the coffee is usually cold before I get any. Dieting is not only good for the complexion, but it also enables the soul, keeps the waistline trim, and reduces the household ex

Finding my husband's shoes gives me a wonderful chance for my daily bending exercises, and digging his clean socks and shirt out from the bottom chiffonier drawer keeps my hips dainty and slender.

STIFF JOINTS OF RHEUMATISM

Stiffness of the joints in rheumatism is caused by inflammation of the joints and a resulting secretion which tends to make the joints difficult to use.

If treatment is not given stiffness occurs, which causes sharp pains whenever the joints are used.

* * *

Weldona tablets have proved very successful in treating this as well as other forms of rheumatism.

* * *

These were the tablets so highly praised in the book on rheumatism, of which a million copies were distributed in campaign to check rheumatism.

Weldona tablets can be had at drug stores.

Is Business Conservatism Being Carried Too Far?

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, March 21.—One impression gathered by the writer through travel and talks in the Middle West is this:

Speculative operations in industry and business never before were on such a small scale. Everywhere prudence is being exercised in production and in buying. This policy, one learns, has been followed for some time. There will thus appear to be no room for any violent drop in activity.

* * *

THE STOCK MARKET, however, is not similarly circumstanced. Here speculation is conspicuous, not by its absence, but by its presence, while the general price trend throughout industry and business has been downwards—and still is—the trend in the stock market has been upwards.

B. C. Forbes

Industrial quotations last week again soared to a new peak, railway shares moved irregularly, but are still within a few points of the year's top and above the highest point touched last year. Speculation has been on a heavy scale. The sudden and spectacular changes are due to the operations of powerful traders, but it is manifest that the public must be in the market on quite a scale.

"WHAT GOES up must come down," says the adage.

Neither the volume of general business nor the general price level has been going up. There is no apparent need of either to suffer, therefore, any great decline.

The stock market, having gone up, may conceivably come down. Unquestionably, were the majority of the strongest operators to switch to the bear side, a relapse of more or less violence could be brought about.

But there is the vital, fundamental factor of easy money to take into the reckoning. While it is true that many prominent stocks are today selling on a low income basis, the fact remains that call and time money and commercial money rates are still lower. And, of course, government and other choicest bonds also afford only a small return at current quotations.

THE CONCLUSION of the whole matter is that, whereas there is room for stocks to drop, there is not the same room for any violent downward swing in business.

WHEN ONE gets away from Wall Street and travels westward, agriculture looms up as a factor of the first importance. Just as there are sharp differences of opinion in the financial metropolis regarding stock market conditions and prospects, so are there sharp differences of opinion in the country regarding the real inwardness of agricultural conditions and prospects. Some tell you that the troubles of the farmers have been exaggerated by Washington politicians having agricultural axes to grind. Others glommily declare that conditions are deplorable.

Certain it is that during the last week price movements have been against our farmers. The rise which was under way in cotton has been checked, wheat has had a setback and most farm products have likewise declined.

One thing reasonably sure is that Congress will find itself importuned, if not compelled, to take steps of some kind with a view to improving the status of our vast agricultural population.

ANOTHER THING you learn from travel is that the building pace has slackened. Nothing alarming is reported. Only, the boom unquestionably is on the wane.

ONE CONVICTION reached, is that there is no occasion whatsoever to urge conservatism. Hand-to-mouth operations are practically the universal practice.

Is there not at least a slight possibility that this procedure may be carried too for and that a brisk demand by consumers for Spring would precipitate a rush for goods which might cause unexpected happenings?

* * *

AS I SEE it, the country could stand a little more optimism and a little less pessimism.

EASTERN S. S. N. Y. SERVICE ALL THE YEAR

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Boston Stock Exchange member who has been among the leading buyers of Eastern Steamship common tells the writer that the freeing of Cape Cod Canal is to bring about another change besides that of relieving the line of paying tolls, the cessation of which he figures will effect a saving equal to about $4 a share on the common annually. He declares it has been practically decided to make the steamship service between Boston and New York an all-the-year-around affair.

Considerable regret is expressed in State Street over the resignation of Andrew Marshall from the Boston Elevated board of trustees. It is felt the board loses a very efficient member. Many remember when "Andy" Marshall was starring in football at Dartmouth and Harvard and later was honored as an All-America guard. It is related that Mr. Marshall's oldest boy, back in 1925, read about Walter Camp's selection. "Why, daddy," he said, "I didn't know you were an All-America guard. Why didn't you ever tell me that?" "Because I was picked by mistake and I didn't want to perpetuate the error," was the father's more than modest reply.

Impression has been given that Union Street Railway of New Bedford, which has been able to pay dividends under a five-cent carfare, has changed to a ten-cent rate, like Boston's. This is not the case. The difference is an important one. It is that riders in New Bedford will be able to buy strip tickets entitling them to four rides for a quarter. I recall calling on Mayor Ashley at New Bedford years ago when the Whaling City had a three-cent car ride rate for workingmen.

Some figures were recently published which purported to show the port of Boston far down in the list, about the 14th if I recall them correctly. I was suspicious that this was another example of figure juggling worked out to belittle our port. "Figures don't lie, but liars figure" runs the rude saying.

* * *

Chauncey D. Snow, manager of the Foreign Commerce Department of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in-transit and transshipment figures that put Boston and the rest of New England in a better light.

In-transit shipments are goods of foreign origin destined for foreign countries which pass through territory of the United States in bond on their way to countries of destination. Transshipment trade consists of merchandise brought in by one vessel and shipped out in another in the same port, the goods remaining under customs custody while in the port.

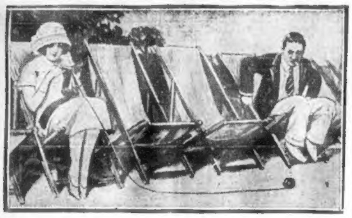
NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Flirting Is Flirting

And It's Useful, Whether Modest and Shy or Knock-Down and Drag Out



FLIRTATION—OLD STYLE.

A man only sees straight ahead in front of him, or a little to the side. A woman, apparently looking straight ahead, can see out of the side of her eye at right angles. Nature has arranged that for her.

This pretty little lady, looking earnestly at her knitting, has observed the young gentleman with the white trousers, thinks well of him, and "accidentally" she has allowed her ball of yarn to roll in his direction. She doesn't know it, so the young man THINKS, and he is delighted at the opportunity to pick it up, carry it over, throw away his cigarette, bow politely, and GET ACQUAINTED.

That old style flirtation is what the French call "vieux jeu" now, but it is still used here and there by old-fashioned girls.

The MODERN girl, if properly interpreted in plays and books, would tell the young man to "shake a leg" and "come on over."

The modern young man, instead of waiting politely for a chance to pick up and return a ball of yarn, would march over and ask, "How's a kid?" and inquire, "What about a little lunch?"

Our present methods are as crude as our skirts and our language.

But, after all, old style flirting, with the rolling ball of yarn, or modern knock-down and drag out flirting, with its wiggling, jumping dances and all the rest of it, represent Nature's method of carrying out her fixed determination, which is to make young people marry and carry on the human race.

The main thing is that it should HAPPEN, that boys and girls should marry, have families and provide human beings that will gradually make this world and the people in it better.

This flirtation method would seem slow to modern girls. But it was effective, and it saved the self-respect of the husband-hunting little girl—if you attach any importance to that.

"Stingy," He Says

"Red Headed Girl," She Replies

THIS SIXTY-FIVE-YEAR-OLD LADY MARRIED THIS TWENTY-ONE-YEAR-OLD CHAUFFEUR—RESULT, TROUBLE.

It is all right for March to marry April, May or June—sometimes. But it doesn't do for March or April to marry December. And when that happens it is especially unfortunate for DECEMBER.

This couple, both meaning well, doubtless, represent April and December. The man, Herman Letorneau, twenty-one years old, married the lady, Mrs. Estelle Woodward, sixty-five years old. He was her chauffeur when he became her husband.

Now they have separated, and love's young-old dream is ruined.

He says the lady was "stingy," which seems ungallant. Perhaps he wished to be supported in a style to which he was NOT accustomed.

She suspects that a girl with red hair, also in the March or April class, has caused the trouble.

Let's hope that each will find a more appropriate and congenial mate.

And meanwhile, APRIL, marry somewhere near your own time of life, and DECEMBER, do the same.

It's better.

WHY LINCOLN WAS A GREAT MAN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

EVERYBODY knows that Lincoln was great, but there has been a persistent effort to ascribe conventional reasons for this.

Lincoln was great, however, simply because he was not great.

That is, he was the apotheosis of the common man.

He could not play the piano like Chopin, he could not read Greek like Gladstone, nor was he a great warrior or commander like Napoleon.

He simply had common sense and brought to bear upon each problem the same kind of intelligence which you and I in a measure possess.

He was not a handsome man, although efforts have been made to idealize him. He was like the man of whom the prophet speaks, "without form or comeliness." His figure was ungainly and his face homely.

It was told by him that when he was a boy he was wandering in the woods when a hunter saw him and pointed his gun at him.

"Hold on there," said Abe. "What are you doing?"

The hunter replied, "I made a solemn vow to my mother upon her deathbed that if I ever saw a man uglier than myself I would shoot him on sight."

Then said Lincoln, after looking carefully at the hunter, "I guess you had better shoot."

Just as Napoleon and Alexander were not tall men and as Dr. Johnson was a gross and fat man, so Lincoln was not a handsome man. The secret of his greatness was not in his personal appearance.

He was clear-headed and his feet were firmly rooted in common sense. In fact, he had no other kind of sense except the common kind.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

An honest man's the noblest work of God.—Pope.

Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much;
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.—Cowper.

The more we know of any one ground of knowledge, the farther we see into the general domains of intellect. —Leigh Hunt.

Never man can lose what he never had.—Walton.

To thine own self be true;
And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.—Shakespeare.

For all things are less dreadful than they seem.—Wordsworth.

And still be doing, never done.—Butler.

Friendship, love, philosopher's stone—
These three things men value alone.
—Heine.

None think the great unhappy, but the great. —Young.

Truth is the summit of being; justice is the application of it to affairs. —Emerson.

Events of great consequence often spring from trifling circumstances. —Livy.

One cannot know everything. —Horace.

Measures, not men, have always been my mark. —Goldsmith.

Silence has many advantages. —Menander.

Thought once awakened does not gain slumber. —Carlyle.

DOCTOR NO "LAMB."

THEY say stock market lambs were made to be fleeced. DR. F. C. HEMEON of Standish street, DORCHESTER, is not of the "lamb" type, evidently for he has shares in Island Creek, the big Boston coal company, that cost him $18 each a type, evidently, for he has shares in this company changed hands above $300 a share. In one recent year it was the biggest dividend payer on either the NEW YORK or BOSTON Stock Exchanges.

OPTICAL NOTE.

Leonardo da Vinci, whose masterpiece, "The Last Supper," and "Mona Lisa," are the best in existence, was a mirror writer, according to one of the speakers at the convention of optometrists recently held in BOSTON. He used this form of reversed writing as a secret code, although, like many left-handed persons. It was simple for him to write that way, according to the same authority. Most left-handed, left-eyed persons unconsciously read words from right to left. As an illustration—they read the word "saw" as "was."

BAKER SMOKES PIPE.

GEORGE F. BAKER, reputed one of the four wealthiest men in the world, descendant of a Colonial Dorchester family, would not have to "walk a mile" for a cigarette—he could ride at the head of a flock of the costliest cars invented. He could buy the cigars that are the boast of royalty. Nevertheless, the aged financier, who comes to Boston in a private car to attend American Telephone directors' meetings, is frequently to be seen here smoking a pipe.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A FATHER speaks
Sh!!!!

DEAR ELSIE:

I have read your articles ever since I can remember and never once have I found a flaw, until recently.

Now, as a father of three fine boys, and a member of a family of seven boys and three girls, I should know a little of a father's feelings, therefore I take exception to your advice in calling in the law on family chastisements.

In my opinion, which of course, is only my opinion, there is entirely too much outside interference with parents correcting children. This is the making of the total disregard for the parental authority today and what is causing all the distress of social life today, bandits and the like.

There is no boss in our home, but my children from the youngest, of five, to the oldest, of sixteen, never lisp a disrespectful word to mother or me. And my wife, God bless her, has taught them that. She can tell when the stress of business has been too great for me the moment I enter the house. From that moment, until she sees me cleaning up, there is no noise. But when she gives the signal, you'd think six of Dante's imps had let loose. There is very little friction in our house, and it's not because she ever calls in any of these phony societies or the police, or whatnots, but because from the beginning she taught them by her actions what respect was. Taught my kiddies to respect me, not by telling them to, but by showing a good example.

Everything Quiet

Just to cite one instance, I came home from the office one night, and before reaching the door had occasion to rebuke a tradesman for some error in delivery. My wife heard the conversation and when I entered the house everything was quiet. We assembled at the dinner table and the quiet got on my nerve and I said: "What's the trouble, some one sick?" and before my wife could reply, my little shaver of five said: "Mummy said we should be especially quiet tonight, daddy don't feel well."

I looked at my wife and she blushed. Did I growl. No. But that put another star in her crown as far as I was concerned. I'll wager you there is no crown big enough for that little angel of mine. And I hope every one of my five offspring take after her. She's an ace with a capital "A".

My kiddies get the cat-o-nine-tails, too. Not often, but enough to know there is one. They are all fine, healthy kids, too. Which is better—to call in the phony old maids, or teach them respect from the beginning—the right way—by example? Please let a constant reader hear your reactions.

J. B. S.

It is impossible to let you hear my reactions, Papa. They don't let things like that through the mails. However, I'll do my best to comply and still keep within the law.

Picture of Self

Behold the picture of yourself as an impartial world sees it. To that world you are not Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, nor even Mussolani. You are merely an individual, one of a family of twelve human individuals. (I am, you'll note, including your wife among the twelve, although there's considerable doubt as to whether she's human or amphibian.) Now it is true that you are a papa and that most of the rest of the family are children. But a papa possesses no emotional centre which children do not possess. A papa is no more capable of weariness than a wife, or a growing child. And, revolting as this statement may seem to you, a papa is no more important in the human ranks than the children he begets.

Yet, home, you stride over the cowering forms of your family, and even the parlor flies dassn't sneeze until you give your august consent. And you expect to be RESPECTED with an attitude like that. And if you're not, why, by golly, you'll fix things with a cat-o-nine-tails!

Marvelous! Wonderful! They ought to keep stuffed specimens of guys like you, Big Boy, so that posterity can see what funny things once inhabited this old globe. What's a mere Diplodocus compared to such a Red Hot Papa?

New Babel Tower

By Garrett P. Serviss

I SOMETIMES wonder whether modern science is not effecting for itself a Tower of Babel, without the intervention of a jealous Lord.

Its workers are piling up, not a great tower of unified knowledge whose top might reach "the highest heaven of invention," but innumerable dirt heaps of technical nomenclature, often ridiculous in its vain affectation of smattering Greek scholarship, and confusing by its ingenious distortions of root meanings.

The language of the world of science thus becomes more "confounded" every day. The growing hordes of researchers help on the busy milling of new coins of scientific speech, which by their very nature can never have more than an extremely limited circulation, and thus the arena of science echoes to babylonian sounds which have little or no meaning to the vast majority—all talking their own dialect.

What is the proper object of scientific study—to exalt the knowledge of one man, or a few men, or to lift up all mankind in knowledge? Of course, the few must learn before the many, but what should be the final aim? If it is to be the benefit of all, then there must be a common language in which it must speak, and this language must be comprehensive of the whole field of science.

Besides, the unity must be effective from the beginning and be strengthened with the progress of knowledge. The workers in the different branches must understand one another, and not speak each in his own tongue. But go to one of the great meetings of the "associations for the advancement of science," attend the conferences of the different sections and see how much unity of speech and of action you can find.

In a dozen different rooms simultaneously there rises the murmur of voices reading "papers," or reports, or discussing them; but they are all talking dialect or "terminology."

Not only the intelligent average "human" wishes they would "talk United States," because something lurks under their lingo that dimly stirs his interest and curiosity, but he observes that the casual visitor from some other section, notwithstanding his training in similar work, looks blank and perplexed, and seems unable to discern the root of the matter under the unrecognisable verbiage any better than the profane one does.
